House Group Today Opens Army Plane Profits Quiz

Dern, Cummings Confer Again on Lobbying Evidence.

Grand Jury Hears 2 More Auto Men

(Associated Press.)

Army contracts, already laden with trouble for at least three persons the Administration accused of lobbying for them, today will become the vehicle for another Congressional inquiry.

Evidence on Army plane contracts, wanted for perusal by the House Military Committee, was handed to Chairman McSwain late yesterday but he deferred going into the audit of airplane costs until today.

While the committee was setting the scene for its inquiry, Secretary Dern was in conference with Attorney General Cummings, presumably to discuss further evidence which the War Department, through the Justice Department, has put in the hands of a grand jury.

3 Names Before Jury.

Dern, like all his subordinates, maintained tight-lipped silence when he emerged from the Attorney General's office.

His talk with Cummings, however, followed closely word that the names of three persons, two of them members of the American Legion and the third a national guard officer, were before the grand jury.

The reported lobbying activities of the three, involving alleged attempts to induce automobile manufacturing concerns to retain them as representatives to procure War Department contracts, was understood to have come to the attention of the White House at about the same time it did to the Justice Department.

Thorough Probe Asked.

President Roosevelt turned the information given him over to Attorney General Cummings with instructions to go to the bottom of the charges. The Chief Executive, however, was informed by the Justice Department that investigations already were under way.

Although the names of the two Legion members, both described as attorneys, were screened in any official utterance, Assistant Secretary of War Harry M. Woodring has

Old Kidnaping Jails Three Men

Trio Seized After 2-Year Search by Judge; 3 More Hunted.

St. Louis, Feb. 7 (AP).—A 370-pound former justice of the peace today brought about the arrest of three men in the 2-year-old kidnaping of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, ear, nose and throat specialist.

Warrants also were issued for three other persons, including a woman, named by Adolph Fiedler, the bulky justice whose tenure in suburban Maplewood has been turbulent and punctuated by various charges against him.

Three of eight men named by Fiedler in a sworn statement before the St. Louis County prosecutor are dead in gang shootings.

Jailed today were Bart Davit, named by Fiedler as one of the men who seized the physician after luring him from his home by a fake sick call on the night of April 20, 1931; a Negro, who Fiedler said was the owner of a farm on which Dr. Kelley was held captive, and a man known as "the Dago." Kelley was released unharmed.

Officers were searching tonight for Tommy Wilders, a Shelton gangster. The woman named by Fiedler conducted a small business in St. Louis County and is accused of aiding the kidnapers in selecting the physician for a victim.

Plane Brings Dying Child to Baltimore

West Virginia Girl, 4, Head Hurt, Rushed to Doctor.

Baltimore, Feb. 7 (AP).—Four-year-old Alicia Brannon, of Weston, W. Va., was brought to Baltimore in an airplane today and was rushed to Johns Hopkins Hospital in an effort to save her life.

The plane, which also carried the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mapel Brannon, arrived shortly after 5 p. m.

The child was said to be suffering from a fractured skull, received when she fell into a dry swimming pool. She was to be examined by Dr. Walter E. Dandy, noted specialist.

Senators Open Battle To Hike CWA Fund

Cutting and La Follette Demand Two Billions After Committee Approves $950,000,000 Bill Whipped Through House.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

With a strong sentiment apparent in favor of increasing to $2,000,000,000 the appropriation for continuing the Civil Works Administration, the Senate yesterday began consideration of the $950,000,000 civil works and relief measure which was whipped through the House in 40 minutes on Tuesday.

The bill was reported out of committee to the Senate floor as it was passed by the House, carrying $450,000,000 for continuation of the civil works program until May 1 and $500,000,000 additional for Federal relief.

Criticized before it even got out of committee by Republicans who objected to the underlying principles, the measure was greeted with amendments to extend its scope and cost immediately after Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, in charge of the measure, completed his opening statement in favor of it.

Senator McKellar sought to anticipate the amendments by which Senators Cutting, of New Mexico, and La Follette, of Wisconsin (Republicans), propose to increase the civil works fund to $2,000,000,000. Civil Works Administrator Harry Hopkins had said that the $450,000,000 asked was all that was needed at this time, Senator McKellar said.

"Mr. Hopkins has said it is the purpose to begin to demobilize the 4,000,000 persons employed under

Tax on Higher Incomes Again Raised in Bill

G. O. P. Fight Called Off; to Report Measure This Week.

By Robert C. Albright.

A $300,000,000 tax bill, with a 4 per cent normal income rate, and surtax schedules again revised, stiffen the load on the higher brackets, was whipped into semi-final shape by the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday.

A last minute shift in surtax levies eliminated many of the "humps" in the present schedules, slightly lowered rates on incomes from $8,000 to $25,000, and moved higher the burden on persons drawing upward of $80,000 a year.

The committee will report out the bill this week, after minor adjustments today and tomorrow. Serious consideration was given last night to a special rule, restricting amendments and limiting debate, when the bill is brought before the House next Tuesday.

G. O. P. Fight Called Off.

Possibility of major Republican opposition to the income tax loophole plugging measure collapsed late yesterday when House Republicans in informal conference decided to "go along" with the Democrats on major provisions of the bill.

Earlier, the House Ways and Means Committee, after effecting adjustments in surtax schedules, agreed to levy 1-5 cent a barrel on domestic oil and ½ cent a gallon on imported oil. A penalty was voted on producers of "hot" or illegal oil, and a so-called "snooper" clause was inserted, granting a heavy reward to persons who inform on oil "bootleggers."

Chairman Samuel B. Hill, of the special Ways and Means Taxation Sub-committee, said last night he is "well satisfied that all of the major tax evasion loopholes are plugged by this bill."

"There are a lot of pinholes we haven't tackled at all, but we've got the big ones, as far as they have been revealed," he said. "Tax specialists will have to show some ingenuity to find a new opening to crawl through."

Predicts $300,000,000.

He reiterated forecasts the bill will raise at least $300,000,000 on income tax revision features alone, not counting revenue from excise levies included in the measure.

Detailed explanation of every phase of the new tax legislation was given at last night's House Republican conference by ranking minority members of the Ways and Means Committee.

No fixed policy was determined, but House Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell said he thought the minority would offer little or no opposition to the major features, although such controversial items as the 5-cents-a-pound excise tax on cocoanut and sesame oil may provoke a debate.

There is no "concerted effort" on the Republican side in behalf of a "sales tax" substitute for the pres-

1,200,000 Utah Acres Closed to Grazing

More than 1,200,000 acres of public domain in Utah have been withdrawn from grazing by executive order of President Roosevelt, signed at the request of Gov. Blood.

Under the order grazing will be allowed only by permit, after the land—described as almost ruined—has been restored to its former condition.

The "sale" of Public Works Administration jobs in Washington was under investigation of PWA agents yesterday as the antigraft campaign of Secretary Ickes was pushed on a widening front.

The Division of Investigation of Public Works said it was preparing the Washington case for the grand jury. Although the identity of a person involved was withheld, it was said that a man who represented himself as a close friend of Secretary and Mrs. Ickes "sold" a number of applicants theoretical jobs on the works program for $20 apiece.

When the jobs failed to materialize, those who paid for them complained to officials. Meanwhile, the individual who obtained the money left town and is now reported to be in Cleveland, under surveillance.

The Washington case was disclosed to be one of a number uncovered by the enlarged force of investigators working on the PWA and CWA programs. A total of 130 special agents now are at work, it was disclosed.

Victims Never Got Jobs.

An investigation report said the "salesman" would approach an applicant for a PWA job saying he was a close personal friend of Secretary Ickes, and had considerable influence.

In support of his contention, he would exhibit letters addressed to himself, containing references to Secretary Ickes and otherwise using the administrator's name. In addition, he would display newspaper pictures of Mrs. Ickes and clippings, explaining that he was a close friend of the Ickes family.

He then would offer to place the applicant on a PWA job for $20. Officials said he had victimized a considerable number of persons, including many Negroes and elderly persons. In no case was a job obtained, nor had Secretary Ickes ever heard of the individual working the game.

Two Face Court Here Today.

The matter was taken up with the District Attorney's office yesterday, and it was stated that if proper witnesses can be found, the case will be turned over to the grand jury.

The case was the second irregularity on the PWA and CWA local

Natal, Brazil, Feb. 7 (AP).—The first regular transatlantic airmail service, linking Europe and South America, became a reality today with the arrival of the German flying boat Typhoon with European mail, and departure for Europe of a cargo from Rio de Janeiro.

The Typhoon brought in more than 300 pounds of mail which had left Stuttgart, Germany, Saturday. The mail was a little more than four days en route here.

Francis X. Bushman To Wed Opera Singer

Chicago, Feb. 7 (AP).—Francis X. Bushman, movie matinee idol of more than a decade ago, today obtained a license to wed Carmelita Ponselle, a soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company and a sister of the star, Rosa Ponselle.

The announcement from Bushman that he planned to marry the singer surprised his friends. Miss Ponselle was reported en route from New York.

Talbot, Film Star, Saves Actress From Flames

Hollywood, Feb. 7 (AP).—A cinematic double play was credited today to Lyle Talbot, screen actor, who made an assist and a putout with one swoop of a carpet.

Talbot was playing in a picture opposite Margaret Lindsay when her fur coat was ignited as she bent over two candles. Talbot seized a carpet, threw it about the girl and rolled her on the floor. Miss Lindsay was not seriously burned.

Brown Slated To Face Air Award Probe

By Martha Dalrymple.

The appearance of former Postmaster General Brown before the Senate Mail Contract Investigating Committee to defend himself against charges of "dictating" the award of air-mail contracts, of burning his office records, and of holding stock in companies directly and indirectly interested in mail awards, was forseen as an imminent probability after a lively episode on the floor of the Senate yesterday.

Party lines were well drawn for the first time since the Democratic investigation of the Republican administration of ocean and mail contracts has become a scandal of major proportions. Senators Fess, Ohio, and Robinson, Indiana, upheld the Republican contention that Brown had been unfairly treated in not being called before the committee to present his side of the story.

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee, stated that he and his colleagues would be "delighted" to hear Brown any time he came to testify.

Trial Rules Promulgated.

The matter rested when Fess agreed to communicate with Brown to find a time convenient for both parties.

The tilt occurred after Black's committee had gone into recess to formulate the rules that will govern the Senate tomorrow when it tries three air line officials and their attorney, William P. MacCracken, former Department of Commerce air official, on charges of contempt of the Senate.

During the morning the committee heard five witnesses, learned that Government specifications for Postoffice flooring were so drawn that the floor blocks of only one favored company could fill the bill, and discovered also that advertisements for bids on a transcontinental air route were changed so that only one favored operator could get the subsidy.

In both these charges Brown was directly involved.

Other developments in the general air-mail and airplane contract awards inquiry included a statement by a Navy auditor before a House investigating committee that his department had been "negligent" in checking up the books of

Cuban Strike Fails To Tie Up Industry

Mendieta's Firmness Stays General Outbreak.

Havana, Feb 7 (AP).—A 24-hour "general strike" called by the Communistic Confederation of Labor was only partly successful today and tonight it appeared the firm policies of the Mendieta government had served to stay labor agitation.

Few of the unions affiliated with the confederation answered the call. Among these were port workers, including stevedores, ferrymen and truck drivers.

The strike in the harbor was broken when other labor was hired "for the duration of the strike." No disorders were reported.

Gasoline Price War Believed Near End Here

Settlement of the gasoline price war in the District appeared likely yesterday following a conference between Secretary Ickes, the oil administrator, and Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey.

Ickes declared "we had a very satisfactory conference. Mr. Teagle showed every disposition to work out a settlement."

Meanwhile, it was announced that the Government's first court proceeding against a major company—an injunction suit against the New Jersey Standard—will be withdrawn. Secretary Ickes said the Standard Co. has agreed to discontinue a boy's prize contest which the Petroleum Board claimed was a form of giving premiums.

Third Grade At 10 Cents.

Third grade gasoline remained at the 10-cent level at independent stations yesterday, while the Standard Oil Co., sold it at 10½ cents. This maintained the half-cent differential the independents are claiming due them, although neither Secretary Ickes nor Mr. Teagle would say a truce has been proclaimed.

The conference between Ickes and Teagle was arranged to discuss the District price war, which oil authorities said was threatened to develop into a National problem. Ickes expressed the informal opinion "we will get somewhere" in

Faces Jail and Fine With Partner if Convicted of Overproduction.

Tyler, Tex., Feb. 7 (AP).—The Federal Government's drive against overproduction of oil from the rich East Texas field reached out today to include Jack Dempsey and his partner, Bobby Manziel, former pugilist.

The former heavyweight boxing champion was charged with overproduction, Manziel was termed "one of the most chronic violators in the field" and a receiver was appointed for their well.

The usual Federal Court penalty upon conviction for overproduction is a $500 fine or six months in jail, or both.

Charles I. Francis, Assistant United States Attorney General, filed complaints charging Dempsey with overproduction of oil since December 1 and with operating bypasses. He asked a temporary and a permanent injunction and prohibition of interference with Federal agents.

At the request of the Railroad Commission and the Attorney General, Will C. Hurst, district judge, named C. L. Norton, of Longview, receiver for the partnership well.

Although Manziel owns eight wells in his own name and others in partnership, he and Dempsey are connected with only the one producer, near Gladewater.

Manziel, an operator about two years, gave part interest in the No. 1 Victory to Dempsey, but the former champion has not been an active operator. He visited the producer last fall with his wife and refereed a fight on the derrick floor.

The partnership well blew in October 21 with a daily potential of 35,000 barrels of oil.

Virginia Senate Report Favors State Distillery

Localities Also to Share Rum Revenue Under Amendment.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 7.—Mandatory State manufacture of liquor was indorsed by the Senate finance committee today.

The whisky action eclipsed a special message delivered to a joint session of the General Assembly by Gov. Peery earlier in the day. He announced a revised tax program which seemed destined to meet stiff opposition.

The important amendments approved by the committee called for distribution of two-thirds of anticipated liquor revenue among political subdivisions on the basis of population, the remainder to go to the State; payment of $7,500 annually to control board members instead of $5,000 as proposed by the House, and mandatory confirmation by the Assembly of the Governor's board appointments.

Cost Estimates Given.

Enlightening estimates of the prospective cost of legal whisky were advanced by Senator John J. Wicker, jr., Richmond City, in gaining a favorable vote of 7 to 6 on his amendment to compel State operation of distilleries.

Wicker argued corn whisky could be made for 25 cents a gallon and rye for 40. He said State dispensaries could sell good whisky for $1.10 a quart, with a 50-cent profit after payment of overhead and Federal taxes. Six distilleries, he added, could be established for $4,000 each.

"Without mandatory manufacture," Wicker declared, "the State would be at the mercy of the liquor monopoly. All except the most high-priced product the private distillers have anyhow, is absolutely rotten."

Weaver Warns of Fight.

Senator Aubrey Weaver, Front Royal, protested privately owned distilleries would be unable to compete with the State if required to pay an annual license fee of $1,000. He warned the fight would be renewed on the floor.

Senator W. Eggleston, Norfolk, author of the amendment to give counties and cities a share of liquor profits, reported local police would hesitate to arrest illicit distillers and bootleggers unless "their counties or cities stand to be better off."

Weaver and Eggleston won an 8-to-6 vote for the amendment to fix salaries at $7,500.

Other amendments favorably reported would forbid drinking of hard liquor in hotels or restaurants, regardless of where it was purchased, and would abolish the authority of dispensary managers to make arrests except in State stores.

"We'll Hold This Dome If We Fight All Year"—Mike de Boid

Editor's note: Disguised as a lyre bird, a Post reporter penetrated the starling outposts at the Capitol last night and obtained an exclusive interview with Mike de Boid, field marshal, directing the starlings' determined and successful stand against the popgun army.

"War is the very Dickens," croaked the marshal, whose voice is a little more throaty than a canary's, but you can tell the world that we intend to fight it out on this line if it takes all winter."

The starling commander, who is a little over average starling height, wears the Croix de Guerre won for a solo combat with a sparrow hawk. He was in good humor as he flew from brigade to brigade of his spartans as they rested on window ledge, portico and dome.

Each squadron he compared to Leonidas' band at Thermopalyae, to the Seventh Cavalry at the Little Bighorn, to Joffre at the Marne or to Teddy's boys at San Juan Hill. As he passed among his fighters, he gave orders for continuation of the intermittent, persistent and everlasting bombing of the battle site.

In fact, Marshal de Boid admitted, off the record, that last night's engagement merely served as an opportunity for the practicing of new flying formations, using the shotgun reports from below as starting guns and signals.

"Seven hundred rounds were fired by those 30 policemen," de Boid said, "and almost before the last echo had died down we were back at our objective with only our digestion disturbed.

"I'm sorry they have taken the show off the networks," he added. "I thought that all this advertising would be the means of getting a little subsidy from the munition makers. The enemy shoot up $25 worth of gunpowder a night."

In closing the interview, Marshal de Boid said that he was sure his forces would hold out the rest of the week—the length of the engagement as promised by opposing leaders, Capt. William S. Orthman, of the Capitol Police, and David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol.

Crippled Schooner Sends Call for Aid

Norfolk, Va. Feb. 7 (Spl.).—With her sail gone and her provisions low, the three-masted schooner Purnell E. White was sighted this afternoon 200 miles east of the Cape Fear River off the North Carolina coast by the steamer Maiden Creek.

The vessel requested the steamer to summon assistance, and a radio message from the Maiden Creek was broadcast. The Cost Guard cutters Mendota and Tiger of the Norfolk division were dispatched to assist the schooner.

The sailing vessel, out of Georgetown, S. C., bound for New York with a cargo of lumber, has been at sea for almost two weeks. She is owned by C. C. Paul, of Baltimore, and has eight in her crew.

Former President To Call Elections

(Copyright, 1934, by The Associated Press.)

Paris, Feb. 7. — Terror struck at the heart of Paris the second time tonight as savage rioting raged in the Champs Elysees, the Rue Royale, and streets leading to the presidential palace.

Scores were wounded, five by bullets, during the second night of riots, but the insurrectionary disorders appeared to be under control.

Premier Edouard Daladier stepped out as a result of Tuesday's bloody fighting, and President Albert Lebrun immediately called the beloved 70-year-old veteran, Gaston Doumergue, to save the precarious situation.

Contempt Inspires Mob.

Mobs last night seethed with resentment over the government's alleged part in the Stavisky pawnshop scandal and economic and racial stress, but disorders today and tonight were inspired by contempt for officers' gunfire that last night took a toll of 12 lives and injured at least 200, 25 seriously. Six died today.

Communists went on a rampage near the American section of the Place de L'Etoile, where France's unknown soldier lies, and cut electric and telephone wires.

Sporadic rioting continued after nightfall in widely separated sections.

Socialists announced they planned a huge demonstration against a "Fascist threat to liberty." They regard the resignation of the Deladier

Censors Clamp Wartime Curb On Rioting News

Paris, Feb. 7 (AP).—The censor, with wartime fervor, tried today to keep the world from reading inaccurate descriptions of riots and news of the cabinet's resignation.

While he and his assistant held up thousands of words in cablegrams, the government-owned telephone lines were kept in constant use by correspondents carrying the same dispatches to all countries.

All operators, even of all the American cable companies, were supervised by government agents who must see every dispatch.

Censorship in France is severe only occasionally, when a statesman is assassinated, a cabinet overthrown, or other such events, and usually only long enough for news to be confirmed officially through leisurely bureaucratic channels.

Spanish Waiters Balk At Serving Officials

Madrid, Feb. 7 (AP).—Forty striking employes of the Hotel Nacional who refused to serve a banquet to high law enforcement officials were arrested today, and soup and ice cream were sent to a laboratory to determine whether it contained poison.

The officials, including Director of Public Safety Valdivia and Gen. Bedia of the civil guard, had been decorated shortly before by President Alcala Zamora in recognition of their services in suppressing the December revolt. Guardsmen served the banquet.

Zukor Visions Paying Stars on Profit Basis

Hollywood, Feb. 7 (AP).—A profit-sharing policy for leading actors and actresses of the screen in the near future was forecast today by Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount.

"When a star becomes valuable to a company through actually bringing people to theaters to see him or her in a picture," said Zukor, "it becomes impossible to determine just what he is worth in terms of salary. The only fair method of paying him in proportion to his value then lies in a share of his picture's profits."

Lower Interest On All Debts, Roosevelt Aim

President's Plan Starts Controversy Involving 250 Billions.

By Raymond Clapper.

President Roosevelt has stirred a new controversy by a general declaration in favor of reduction of interest rates on public and private debts, which are estimated to approximate $250,000,000,000.

In answer to an off-hand question at the White House semiweekly press conference, the President indicated he thought it would be desirable to readjust interest rates downward on a great many debts of foreign governments, on municipalities, and on private obligations of industries, railroads, farmers and owners of real estate, generally.

Legislation for relief of debt-ridden cities is due to come up in the Senate shortly. The House passed the Wilcox bill last June, providing that two-thirds of the creditors of any governmental unit could unite on a refinancing plan, with court approval, which would bind all bond holders.

Chairman Van Nuys, of the Senate judiciary sub-committee, which is soon to report this bill, indicated last night he would oppose it on the Senate floor.

Van Nuys Sees Bad Effect.

"Municipal bonds," he said, "have been held up as second to Government bonds. It would have a bad effect to provide for compulsory reduction of interest rates on them. There are some 300,000 to 400,000 Governmental units in the country and less than 2,000 are in difficulties.

"The proportion is so small that I think it would be better for the States to handle the problem, which they can do under the recent Minnesota mortgage decision of the Supreme Court. Furthermore, I think there are constitutional objections to the Federal Government interferring."

A recent Department of Commerce survey placed the total debt of American political subdivisions in 1932 at $19,684,599,000, which is an average of $158.10 per capita, about double what it was ten years ago.

In some quarters, the disclosure of President Roosevelt's attitude toward interest rates was taken to indicate that he does not expect Administration efforts to raise price levels to be sufficient to support the heavy overstructure of debts, and that supplementary action in the cases of many debtors of all classes will be necessary.

In theory, the President explains, the interest rate varies wtih the security. But in practice, he has not observed that this theory has been followed.

For instance he cites the interest rates on small first mortgages, sometimes running to 9 or 10 per cent on property constituting excellent security, while city buildings, particularly those of the boom period, are financed on money at 5 or 5½ per cent with far less security under them as many investors in real estate bonds can testify.

Rail Charges Too High.

Closely linked with the question is the problem of reducing the debt structure. It is President Roosevelt's theory that when interest is reduced, there is more left for amortization of principal. He feels the interest charges carried by the railroads are too large in proportion to their capital.

Recently, the President urged railroads to establish sinking funds and gradually shave down their overhead of debt rather than go on indefinitely refinancing every time a bond issue matured.

He emphasized that such measures would be in the interest of investors. Foreign bonds were cited, some of which carry 8 per cent interest, which the President believes to be an unconscionable rate. He believes the average investor would rather take less interest and get his principal back, than insist on 8 per cent and lose his capital.

He believes many municipalities, especially, are in need of such aid. In any number of cases they borrowed at 6 per cent when they ought to have got their money for about 4 per cent. In such cases, if 60 to 75 per cent of the creditors feel it is to their interest to pare down the interest and avert defaults, a few holdouts, the President feels, should not be allowed to stand in the way.

Figures were gathered by Representative J. Mark Wilcox (Democrat), Florida, in preparing his municipal refinancing bill. More than 1,000 governmental units, he says, are in default in interest or principal or both. He listed in 3 States, 193 counties, 398 cities and towns, 142 school districts, 185 reclamation, levee, irrigation and drainage districts and 97 other districts as of last spring.

Cites Specific Instance.

He said his own State of Florida had 148 defaulting units; North Carolina, 152; Texas, 83; Ohio, 79; California, 73; Arkansas, 42; Missouri, 41; Kentucky, 34; Oregon, 35, and Michigan, 28.

Representative Wilcox cited an instance where a holder of $2,000 in bonds out of a total of $952,000 broke up a proposed settlement. In another case, a holder of 2 per cent of the bonds also stopped a readjustment which a majority of creditors wanted.

Recently, however, President Roosevelt indicated some wariness in applying this principle when he objected to German proposals to reduce interest rates on bonds held by American citizens. His main objection was that there appeared to be discrimination against American bondholders.

Virginia Chief Urges Dry Violators' Release

Richmond, Feb. 7 (AP).—The opinion that persons convicted under the State prohibition law, as well as those awaiting trial, should be released with repeal of the Layman act, was expressed today by Maj. Edwin H. Gibson, assistant attorney general.

government as a desertion and a surrender to reactionaries.

They sought Communist support for demonstrations in conjunction with the general strike Monday, and asked the confederation to advance the date of that manifestation.

The Socialists' protest was scheduled to start from the Place de la Bastille, fall of which marked the beginning of the French Revolution.

Pistol Battles Near Church.

Running pistol battles, meanwhile, broke out near the Madeleine Church between police, Communists and hoodlums at 10:30 p. m.

Six barricades had been built along the Boulevard des Capucines. Mobs set fire to all newspaper vending places from the Opera to the Madeleiine, and smashed store windows.

Just a few minutes previously, the streets near the Elysee Palace were swept by savage pistol firing. Scores were wounded.

Mobs were hurled back from the President's palace by gunfire and the vicious club play of police, and then surged toward the Boulevard des Capucines.

Wounded were taken to cafes for treatment.

In another sector also the fighting flared. The bridgehead barricade near the Place de La Concorde, scene of the fiercest fighting last night, was repeatedly assaulted by mobs.

Inside the palace, which was protected by a small army, President Lebrun sought a solution to what he called a "tragic situation."

All ground-floor windows of the famous department store, Trois Quartiers, in the Boulevard de La Madeleine, were smashed.

Police Hold Fire.

Police declared they had withheld their fire, under orders, and that all shots had come from rioters. Fire hydrants were opened and the manifestants deluged by water.

There seemed to be little inclination to charge the empty Chamber of Deputies, focal point of yesterday's disorders.

Sporadic firing, however, continued along the boulevards until 11:30 p. m.. At least 50 were known to be wounded. Most of these suffered cracked heads from police clubs and were treated at the Cafe Weber.

Volunteers patrolled the streets picking up wounded. An army medical officer set up a first-aid station. A woman and a boy were among the first treated. Fifty persons were treated for injuries at the Beaujon Hospital alone.

M. Lebrun was understood to have prepared a decree by which Doumergue could dissolve Parliament and call new elections to still the mobs' ominous cries of "Thieves!" and "Assassins!" directed at the government.

Men and women were knocked to the ground as the mob spirit was unleased again this afternoon. They were trampled by galloping horses from which saddles and riders had been torn.

Mobs Beat Guardsmen.

Rioters built a barricade before the American Embassy, on the opposite side of the Place de la Concorde from the Chamber of Deputies building.

Scores were injured as guardsmen attacked the barricade. A number of wounded were carried off in ambulances and private cars before the police succeeded in clearing the square and in driving the mobs toward the Madeleine church.

Hospitals already held 182 injured in the riots. At least 282 more were treated in hospitals. Thousands suffered minor hurts.

Adding to the seriousness of the crisis were disorders by Royalists in provincial cities, Lille, Nantes and Nancy, where police had to be summoned to subdue the mobs.

At Lyons, several thousand men and women, hooting Premier Daladier, filled the main streets, hurling epithets at the government.

Police at Lyons declared the rioting this evening was mostly led by Communists, many of whom were armed. Royalists, leaders in earlier demonstrations; Socialists and war veterans were not so much in evidence.

The crowds, however, were swelled by citizens, who were embittered by the machine gun, pistol and rifle fire of police, mobile guards and troopers yesterday. Violence started as night came on.

Crisis Up to Doumergue.

M. Doumergue, aged former president, who was prevailed on to attempt the difficult cabinet-forming job only after he had once refused, and the task had been offered to former Premier Louis Barthou, faced overwhelming pressure by all political parties to save Paris from further bloodshed.

He agreed to hurry here from his country home and to form a small cabinet of prominent men within 12 hours.

His conditions seemed to be that M. Lebrun insure him full power to rule by decree as Raymond Poincare did in 1926.

Former Premier Pierre Laval played a prominent role in the Doumergue negotiations and appeared likely to be a member of the new industry, which possibly will be one of public safety and national union.

Should Doumergue succeed in forming a ministry he will be the sixth premier of France in one year and ten days. The aged statesman said he hoped for success.

The ministry of war denied today that martial law had been declared in Paris.

M. Daladier had inherited all the distressing problems that had caused the downfall of four previous cabinets since January 28, 1933.

These included an unbalanced budget, the need for cutting civil servants' pay, unemployment, parliamentary bickerings, economic and social unrest, and, most important, the bond manipulations of Serge Stavisky that caused the failure of his Bayonne pawnshop, the loss of $40,000,000 to the investing public, and accusations of graft in high places.

Resignations Accepted.

After lengthy conferences with legislative leaders, M. Daladier resigned at 1:30 p. m. Seventy minutes later his ministers relinquished the posts they assumed January 30.

President Lebrun immediately accepted the resignations.

Daladier had hoped to form a coalition cabinet to allay the mud-flinging aftermath of the Bayonne fiasco and had bravely started out to purge the administration by discharging Jean Chiappe, popular prefect of Paris police, and offering him the post of residing general of Morocco.

His action helped him gain three votes of confidence from a riotous Chamber of Deputies yesterday, but at the same time brought upon him the wrath of the Chiappe-worshiping populace.

The French Stock Exchange observed five minutes of silence for "those who were assassinated last night" by bullets of police and soldiers.

Daladier's ministry—in office, as customary, until the naming of successors—met at 4 p. m. to map a course of action.

Authority was given to reinforce the 14,000 police on duty with more regiments of troops.

The news of Daladier's resignation swept the crowd, but it did not subdue the mobs' wrath. They still cried, in ever-increasing volume, "Long Live Chiappe!"

Several legislators felt at first-hand the bitter feeling of the mobs. Herriot was said to have been jostled by Communists and Royalists as he left the chamber, and another hooting crowd forced Senator Camille Rolland to seek refuge in a restaurant.

Royalist Editor Arrested.

Police arrested Charles Maurras, director of the Royalist organ, Action Francaise, which repeatedly charged the government with participation in the Stravisky scandal. Two weeks ago, it urged demonstrations against the government. Those protests were the forerunners of the riots.

Scenes of sorrow were enacted here as anxious relatives consulted casualty lists for names of those who did not return after last night's disorders.

To keep arms out of the hands of rioters, the sale of weapons in the Paris district was forbidden, gunshops were ordered closed.

civil works administration by February 15 and to complete that demobilization by May 1," the Tennesseean said.

The Administration plan does not contemplate cutting all of those off the Government pay roll, however, he explained, adding that Mr. Hopkins said it was planned to transfer as many as could be to the Public Works Administration rolls.

Workers' Compensation Asked.

Extension of the protection of the employes' compensation law to Civil Works employes was proposed in an amendment proposed by Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, and he was supported by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York; Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), Colorado; Senator La Follette, and others.

Senator McKellar fought hard against the amendment, refusing to accept it and denouncing it in principle.

"If this amendment is adopted you will have for years on the Government rolls as many as our entire army during the World War," he cried. "These men are not examined. Every one of the 4,000,000 will apply. This is a proposal to tack on to an emergency measure by a technicality a provision which will add millions to its cost. It is not the purpose of the Civil Works program to make pensioners of the people."

"This amendment proposes to apply the benefits of the employes compensation act only to those actually injured on the job on which they are employed," Senator Wagner said.

Millions Already Claimed.

"There are applications now totaling $14,000,000 and other applications which can be expected will amount to $21,000,000 more," Senator McKellar said. "The proposal is something like a person borrowing $50 and saying now if I get hurt you'll have to lend me $150 more."

"I can see no excuse for excluding Civil Works Administration employes from the compensation act," Senator La Follette said. "The Civil Works Administration employes are no more in the position of accepting a gratuity than are the employes of the Public Works Administration."

Vote on the Hayden amendment, which would have set aside $14,000,000 for which claims already have been made and placed a maximum of $5,000 on payments which could be made, was prevented when Senator McNary, of Oregon, Republican leader, suggested a roll call vote would be unfair so late in the day without a quorum call.

French Unrest Held Universal

Dr. Mary F. Woolley Claims Instability Has Hurt Geneva Plans.

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—The present flare-up in France is "an example of the way conditions have got under the nerves of humanity all along the line, both nationally and internationally," Dr. Mary E. Woolley, delegate to the Disarmament Conference and president of Mount Holyoke College, said today. She added:

"While the trouble may be due to a particular financial scandal in France, the instability of the French government and its troubles at home have been a handicap in negotiations at Geneva.

"When a government doesn't know whether it will exist another week or another month, it can't make the same pledges as a more stable government. There have been eight ministries in France, and maybe more, since the Disarmament Conference began."

Dr. Woolley came to New York to be one of the speakers at a dinner given by the Women's University Club tonight to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

She said that despite disturbed conditions in France and Germany and militaristic propaganda in Japan, some slow progress was being made toward "sane international relations."

ent bill, he disclosed. But, he added, he would be "surprised" if some one does not offer the sales tax on the floor.

"Personally, I think there is more interest in a sales tax now than ever," he said. "The fact that most of the States are resorting to it, is argument enough for its efficacy."

Result of Protests.

Yesterday's slight revision of surtax schedules, ranging from 4 per cent on incomes of from $4,000 to $8,000 to 59 per cent on incomes of $1,000,000 and over, was the outgrowth of protests that too heavy a burden was levied on persons drawing from $8,000 to $25,000 a year, under the committee's recent regrouping of incomes into 27 brackets.

Roswell Magill, tax adviser for the Treasury, went into conference with L. H. Parker, the committee's tax expert, and the so-called injustices were ironed out, with the result that persons drawing between $25,000 and $80,000 will pay a higher tax.

The changes will result in no increases in revenue. In fact, the 10 per cent deduction previously allowed on earned incomes up to $8,000, will cut the revenue from this section from $40,000,000 to $30,000,000.

Oil Excise Levies.

Under the oil excise levies voted yesterday, 1-10 of a cent a barrel will be collected on oil at the wells, and another 1-10 of a cent at the refineries, revenue stamps required with each process, making it difficult to "bootleg" oil..

The ½ cent a gallon tariff on imported oils, proposed by Secretary of Interior Ickes, was agreed to by a 16 to 7 vote over the vehement opposition of Chairman Robert L. Doughton, who is trying to free the bill of tariff legislation. Mr. Doughton will move for reconsideration tomorrow.

On motion of Representative James V. McClintic (Democrat), Oklahoma, a civil penalty of $500 is provided for producers and purchasers of illegal oil who fail to make returns showing income from this source, with a $50 additional tax for every day the tax goes unpaid.

The McClintic amendment would award 50 per cent of this penalty tax to persons furnishing information on bootleg oil tax evanders.

Probers Await Brown Defense Of Air Awards

companies which made airplane engines for the Government.

The House Military Affairs Committee today will begin its inquiry into Army airplane contracts, to determine whether contractors have reaped exorbitant profits from supplying planes and engines to the Army.

The discussion in the Senate was originated by Senator Clark, of Missouri, who defended the Democratic Postoffice administration by saying that at least assistants of the present Postmaster General did not "take the precaution of burning their records."

This brought Fess to his feet with a spirited defense of Brown in which he said that he hoped the committee would be "fair enough and square enough to bring the former Postmaster General down here to testify on a matter that certainly will be cleared up when he is brought before the committee."

Suggesting that the committee's reluctance to summon Brown was due to the possibility that under a summons he would be immune from subsequent criminal proceedings based on his testimony before the committee, Fess assured Black that there would be "no question of immunity."

"If a trade becomes necessary we will exempt or free the committee from any such burden," said Fess. "I want that done, and the former Postmaster General wants it done."

"I am insisting that he be called, instead of allowing people to judge on rumors and innuendo," continued Fess. "It is unfortunate that this body will permit a committee to operate like a grand jury in investigating a matter of great interest."

Black Will Be Delighted.

"I shall be delighted to have him come at any time he desires to come before the committee voluntarily," replied Senator Black, frigidly polite, with great emphasis on the word "voluntarily."

Meanwhile the possibility of contract cancellation and criminal action advanced in other parts of the city. Department of Justice investigators had another day's developments to put in their notebooks and to help crystallize a growing feeling that criminal prosecution may result from the revelations.

Postmaster General Farley issued a statement saying that his department is permitting "no unnecessary delay" in reaching a decision on whether any of the existing contracts should be canceled as having been awarded collusively.

Senator Black's committee heard Frank E. Bruce, president of the E. L. Bruce Lumber Co., manufacturers of floor blocks, testify that Joseph H. Bagley, Brown's partner in stock dealings, received fat commissions on all purchases by the Government from the Bruce company.

He admitted that the specifications for postoffices in Chicago and Danville, Ill., and 10 or 12 other places, had been drawn so that only Bruce blocks could qualify.

After Bagley's death, Bruce went to Toledo at the request of Brown, who was residuary legatee under Bagley's will. There the former Postmaster General asked that Bagley's estate receive a 75 per cent commission on the various postoffice deals. They came to no agreement.

Ordered to Make Charges.

Frank E. McMillan, former superintendent of engineering and research in the Postoffice Department, supplemented Bruce's testimony with the statement that he changed the specifications for flooring, against his better judgment, on orders from the then Postmaster General. The block-on-end type of flooring, in his opinion, would have been more satisfactory than the Bruce blocks for the needs of postoffice.

McMillan further explained that the Government paid between $6,000 and $7,000 more for Bruce blocks in the Louisville postoffice than the block-on-end flooring would have cost.

W. J. Wood, sales representative for the Bruce Co., said that Bagley was very anxious to get an option on a large block of Bruce stock at a figure under the market price.

"This was when the stock was going very high on the Chicago board," explained Wood. "Bagley said that his gang thought he already had the option and that was why he was so anxious."

Bagley Got Cut Rates.

Evidence that Bagley got cut rates on the Hamburg American Steamship Line through the Postoffice Department during Brown's tenure of office was the offering of E. R. White, former director of the division of international postal services of the Postoffice Department.

In passing, he mentioned that he and former Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover had been given a free passage to Europe on the same line.

Earl B. Wadsworth, former superintendent of air mail, related details of the 1930 "spoils conference," called at Brown's order to divide the air-mail map before he awarded the contracts.

Correspondence was read showing that a transcontinental route from New York to Los Angeles was scheduled to go to the Robertson Air Line. According to previous testimony, this award was made only after the Robertson interests had merged with the American Airways, operating company for the Aviation Corporation.

Wadsworth admitted that he prepared a list of objections to the bid of United Aviation, one of the independents seeking the Government subsidy for the route.

Most of the suggestions for additional specifications, such as night-flying qualifications, with which United Aviation could not possibly comply, had been made by MacCracken, according to the correspondence.

Nearly all these suggestions were followed, said Wadsworth.

Determined Effort Made to Prevent Ouster of Sixth Brigade.

Heartened by the manner in which several members of Congress have rallied in defense of its quarters, the Sixth Marine Reserve Brigade is enjoying a 30-day "reprieve" and meantime making new plans to save its home.

Postponement of the order that the brigade's 52 officers and 1,136 men give up their rooms at 458 Indiana avenue and 312 John Marshall place was announced last week by the District Commissioners a few days after Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had been asked to intercede. Now they have until March 2 to get out so the police department can take over the space for storage purposes.

But they are not going to get out, Lieut. Col. Joseph J. Staley, commanding officer, reiterated yesterday. And that goes even though one of the members is drawing up designs for a permanent brigade armory.

Officer Drawing Plans.

Wolcott C. Waggaman, Washington architect and a lieutenant in the reserves, will submit the armory plans in a few days, Col. Staley disclosed. However, since it may be years before it is built, if it is built at all, and since the present quarters won't be razed for some time to make way for the proposed Municipal Center, the colonel is as determined as ever to retain the facilities next to police headquarters and in the old church building around the corner.

Mrs. Roosevelt's help was asked by the American Coalition, an organization of 98 patriotic, civic and fraternal groups, after a committee had failed to reach Commissioner Hazen.

Whether she acted has never been divulged, said Lieut. Col. Orvel Johnson, and it may only be a coincidence that the stay was announced shortly after the committee had delivered its appeal at the White House.

Powers That Be Protest.

Mrs. Virginia E. Jenckes, member of Congress from Indiana, last week protested the threatened ouster to the Commissioners. Three of her colleagues are just as determined that the order be rescinded. They are Clark W. Thompson, of Texas; Vincent Carter, of Wyoming, and Andrew L. Sommers, of New York.

All are members of the Marine brigade, Thompson a major and the other two captains.

The outfit spent upward of $5,000 in renovating the church and Indiana avenue quarters, claim its officers, and it positively will not let that go for naught.

mentioned the name of Joseph Silverman in an order barring Silverman and his associates from contacting any member of the War Department.

Woodring Tuesday spent two hours before the grand jury, supposedly describing the activities of lobbyists and would-be lobbyists for Army contracts.

More Witnesses Heard.

While Justice Department investigators, cooperating with the War Department, swung afield in search for additional material on the lobbyist charges, the grand jury listened to more witnesses. Among them were two more motor company officials, George Reynolds, of the General Motors Corporation, and A. H. Ferrandou, the manager of a local Chrysler agency.

The House Military Affairs Committee proposes to audit the books of aviation concerns in the manner already used by the Naval Affairs Committee in a study of aircraft manufacturers on Navy contracts.

McSwain indicated the inquiry would extend beyond the mere checking of plane costs and profits to manufacturers. When Silverman's name was mentioned, he told reporters: "Yes, we'll go into that, too."

the negotiations to settle the local troubles.

Ickes was reluctant to characterize the local situation as the key to the National problem of differentials between independents and major companies and to price wars, but admitted it might grow to that. He said he and Teagle discussed the "general subject matter" of differentials and was hopeful that further negotiations would bring settlement of that question and the price problem.

Teagle Talks to Lawyers.

Following his talk with Ickes, Teagle summoned members of his legal staff and conferred with Nathan Margold and Dr. John Frey of the Petroleum Board.

The injunction suit was to be opened today in District Supreme Court. The Government was seeking to stop the Standard Oil boys' prize contest as a violation of the petroleum code provision against premiums. Ickes said Teagle had told him the company had discontinued the contest.

"In view of this," Ickes said, "I feel that our attorneys may now discontinue the suit."

Teagle stated his company had started the contest in belief it did not violate the code.

They chopped away 150 feet of cable along the Chicago & North Western Railway tracks a mile north of the Chicago Terminal, severing 32 communication lines used by the railroad and the Western Union Telegraph Co. between Chicago and St. Paul.

Charge of CWA Job Favoritism Brings Inquiry

Louisa Committee Member Causes Investigation by Quitting Post.

Louisa, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Charges of "inefficiency" and "gross corruption" in the Louisa County Civil Works organization, made by Dr. E. Barbour Pendleton, of Louisa, who claimed men of means are getting CWA employment while men with dependents were denied work, will be reviewed at a public hearing promised by Frank Hartman, of Charlottesville, district CWA administrator.

A conference at Louisa Courthouse of Mr. Hartman, Dr. Pendleton, John Q. Rhodes, of the House of Delegates and chairman of the Louisa advisory committee; Robert Thraves, district complaint adjuster, and Barton Burton, National reemployment manager in Louisa, will make arrangements for hearing.

Mr. Thraves was sent to Louisa immediately upon publication of the charges of Dr. Pendleton, a former member of the CWA committee of Louisa County, who resigned because "I was not willing to be a party to the inefficient and corrupt practice of the CWA organization."

Agents Hear Supervisor.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Thirty-one purchasing agents and clerks representing the 16 units of Civil Works District 3 heard plans outlined by Maj. William A. Coleman, State supervisor of purchasing, to coordinate CWA work and increase the staff at a meeting here.

Maj. Coleman stated 55,800 bills for materials have been received in Richmond and that only 2,500 have been paid because of the volume received.

Attending the meeting were Maj. Coleman, Ray C. Hopkins, district administrator, who presided; W. F. Carter, jr., assistant district administrator; W. E. Wood, district purchasing supervisor; Mrs. M. F. Pettingill, chief clerk; John A. Meek, Spotsylvania purchasing agent, and Mrs. R. H. Shannon, assistant.

Alexandria Agent Present.

Other purchasing agents at the meeting included C. S. Hunter, jr., and Miss Thelma Faville, of Fredericksburg; W. S. Gill, Stafford County; Thomas Lynch, Prince William County; O. S. Stone, Alexandria; H. H. Miller, Arlington County; A. F. Robinson, Clarke County; R. W. Huffman, Culpeper County, and his assistant, Mrs. Susan S. Garr; J. B. Plummer, Fairfax County; B. C. Ashby, Fauquier County; W. D. Purks, King George County; W. V. Groome, Loudoun County; Miss Frances I. Keim, Page County; Miss Margaret Meigs, Rappahannock County; R. E. Herr, Warren County, and his assistant, Miss Elizabeth White, and H. L. Taylor, Caroline County.

Projects made possible by the "second phase" of the civil works program, which depends on appropriation bills now pending before the Senate, yesterday were discussed by the Fredericksburg recovery program committee, of which Dr. R. J. Payne, Mayor, is chairman.

The CWA office next week-end will be moved from the Law Building to the Maury Hotel.

$55,000 Spent in Stafford.

Stafford Courthouse, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Approximately $55,000 of civil works funds have been circulated in Stafford County since relief activities began in November, according to James Ashby, county CWA administrator and clerk of the circuit court.

The Stafford pay roll has totaled $25,883.95, while $12,391.69 has been spent on materials. At present, 282 are engaged on CWA projects in Stafford and 68 on public works projects, while the list of jobless now stands at 627.

Ashby has been authorized by the board of supervisors to ask CWA funds for enlarging the clerk's office and reindexing the clerk's office records, in the event the Federal Government provides an extension of the civil works program.

Falmouth to Build Sewers.

Falmouth, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Lack of a community water system here will not delay laying of sewers under the civil works program, because the sewers will be used by families having private water systems in their homes.

Approval has been procured from the State board of health for the sewers to empty into the Rappahannock River immediately below the village and above Fredericksburg. Levin J. Houston, jr., city manager of Fredericksburg, stated the danger of pollution is negligible.

Water mains will be laid in Falmouth after an agreement is reached between Fredericksburg, which will furnish the water; Spottsylvania County, through a part of which the water will be piped, and Falmouth.

5 Workers Arraigned.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Five CWA employes were arraigned here charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, before Police Justice Henry Dannehl, after a probe to determine if CWA workers are providing for dependents with their wages.

Sanitary Officer R. E. Beckham testified that all five defendants, each of whom was separated from his wife, had listed from two to four dependents and because of this had been given preference for jobs.

Justice Dannehl required three of the men to turn over $4 of their $10.80 pay each week to their wives. Two of the men have lost their jobs.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The newly organized District Nurses Association, embracing nurses in the Eastern Panhandle and South Branch Valleys, will hold its first stated meeting in this city February 21, it was announced today by Mrs. Owen Walsh, this city, president.

Virginia's Hills Supply Dinner Music Tonight

State Chamber Celebration Will Hear Ancient Folk Ballads.

Richmond, Feb. 7 (Spl.).—"Good old mountain music" will be heard here tomorrow at the annual banquet of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, celebrating its tenth anniversary.

Many of Virginia's finest folk musicians will be here to sing, dance and make merry to tunes their pioneer ancestors sang in pre-Revolutionary War days.

Sea chanties that were old before they came here 300 years ago in the forecastles of English ships, will compete with the stomp of real "hill-billy" feet; and love ballads sung by gold-lace gallants in Queen Elizabeth's reign will be heard in the sweet notes of mountain fiddles.

White-haired mountaineers will step out in real old-fashioned folk dances, while Horton Barker, famous blind ballad singer of Marion, Va., will offer his twentieth century audience the quaint tunes of colonial days.

Movement 21 Years Old.

It is only in the last decade that the 21-year-old campaign to preserve the ancient music of Virginia people has been given recognition.

The movement officially began in Richmond April 17, 1913, when the Virginia Folk Lore Society was founded for the collection and preservation of Virginia ballads and folk lore. Prof. C. Alphonso Smith, of the University of Virginia, was the founder. The society started with only a handful of members and ended by enlisting patriotic supporters from all parts of the State. Within a few years they had gathered the richest collection of ballad lore of any State in the Union.

Ballads were found in each of the 100 counties of the State. Fifty-one whole ballads and tunes were recovered and over 650 fragments. Nearly all were painstakingly traced back to English and Scotch-Irish origins. Sung in old England for centuries, they were brought to this country by Virginia's first settlers of Jamestown days and then handed down from father to son for generations.

Found Far in Hills.

Most of them came from deep in the mountains, where they have been chanted for generations around the hearth fires of remote cabins. When folk lore searchers trudged on foot or rode horseback to these hill homes they found many of the singers had never been in a real-sized town, had never seen a street car or ridden in an automobile.

Yet they had preserved intact these old English ballads, even adding to them with hill poesy the stories of their own loves, tragedies and feuds. Some of these ballads numbered scores of verses, but through daily repetition each was fast in the memory of the youngest mountaineer.

Students say they have found the old-fashioned folk musician is different from any other artist in the musical world. He learns his tunes by ear and carries them unerringly. Often the maker of his own instruments, he loves to add his own variations, though never losing the main thread of the music. He beats time with his feet and can bring as lively a tune from his home-made fiddle as any jazz band.

Will Sing for Hours.

But most of all, he is noted for losing himself in his songs. Completely unconscious of any audience, he will play untiringly for hours at a time, immersed in the old tunes.

Although there are many rollicking ballards telling tales of high comedy and gay adventure, most of them recount stories of love that ends in tragedy. At tomorrow's banquet the wistful strains of "Barbara Allen," who died of remorse after causing the death of her lover, will be sung; and the haunting melody of the old ballad of "Lord Lovel," the gay English gallant who returned from adventuring too late to claim his lady, will remind modern listeners that the most enduring melodies are those that touch the heartstrings.

The program has been arranged by Mrs. John P. Buchanan, chairman of the folk music committee of the National Federation of Music Clubs, director of the Virginia State Choral Festival and sponsor of the White Top Music Festivals.

Virginia Starts "Tapering Off" CWA Pay Rolls

Richmond, Feb. 7 (AP).—The "tapering off" process to close out the public spending program under the CWA was indicated in pay roll figures for the State as of last Saturday, made public today by J. S. James, chief auditor for the State CWA administration.

Saturday's total disbursements came to $685,487, Mr. James said, while the number of men and women on civil works and civil works service pay rolls was 70,687. The totals for the week previous were $746,970 and 74,437 workers.

The decrease of $61,483 in the pay roll, and of 3,750 in the number of workers, was proportionate with similar decreases since the "stop order" of January 18 became effective.

Continuance Held Assured.

State and local work officials were generally of the opinion today, however, that a continuance of the program beyond February 15 was assured. The effectual majority by which the $950,000,000 works and relief bill passed in the House on Monday left little doubt, they said, of an extension of CWA for another month or six weeks.

One of the State administration staff members, however, was less optimistic, asserting that the program already has largely overspent its original appropriation of $500,000,000, and the new appropriation of $450,000,000 would be only slightly more than sufficient to "pay the bills" which have already been contracted.

Complaints Persist.

Reports of dissatisfaction over the administration and job-giving practices of the CWA in various localities continue to be received at the office of Sidney B. Adair, executive assistant State administrator, but the major difficulties in each instance have been adjusted thus far, Mr. Adair said.

A recent report of Oscar E. Parish, complaint investigator for the first district, showed that four persons in Middlesex County were discharged from the CWA last week. One of these was a contracting carpenter who postponed a contract to build a small residence in order to accept a CWA job which presumably offered better pay.

Roanoke Advisors Named.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—An advisory board to confer with and advise the local civil works administrator is announced by W. B. Rogan, assistant deputy administrator for District 8, as follows: City Manager W. P. Hunter, Councilman J. P. Mundy, E. M. Herringdon, Dr. Frank S. Cooper and Mrs. Joseph Forman. The group replaces the old citizens advisory committee, appointed when the Family Welfare Society was the local agency for administration of Federal emergency relief funds. Since it was named much of the work has been transferred to the CWA.

Clifton Forge Waits Sanction.

Clifton Forge, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Two miles of sidewalks will be built, 51 blocks of streets will be improved and additions and improvements will be made to the city hall and public schools here, provided the list of projects prepared by this city is approved by CWA headquarters in Richmond.

The projects, which would give part-time employment to 400 men for 10 weeks, will cost $64,880.50. In addition, plans are being made to furnish about 7,000 hours of work to unemployed women.

Covington Protests.

Covington, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The local CWA board has protested to headquarters against further curtailment of projects in this area. According to the local chairman, the number of men employed here has been limited to 643 and any further reduction would make it impossible for this area to get in the number of man hours already allotted.

The board has also protested the ruling which forbids the shifting to other jobs of men not already on the pay roll. It is believed this ruling will prevent men not already employed from replacing those who have worked since the start of operations.

Death of Chemical Workers Probed

Third Man Is Criticilly Ill at Williamson, W. Va.

Williamson, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—As a result of the death of two chemical workers and the critical illness of a third, physicians today ordered analyses of the victims' stomachs at the State laboratory at Charleston in an effort to determine the cause.

Cullie Jarrell, 27, and Howard T. Stevens, 30, are dead and Thomas Jarrell, brother of Cullie, is in a hospital.

Paris Storm Will Blow Self Out, de Lamus Says

Richmond, Feb. 7 (AP).—Belief that the storm which broke upon the French Government in Paris would blow itself out without leading the nation into revolution was expressed here today by Pierre De Lanux, director of the Paris office of the League of Nations.

The Paris League director came to Richmond to speak tonight at the University of Richmond on "The Disarmament Outlook for 1934."

McCue Drafts Law to Reduce Utility Charges

Virginia Delegate Would Force Revaluation of Properties.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Feb. 7.—Legislative action to compel drastic reduction in electric power rates was predicted tonight by Delegate E. O. McCue, jr., Charlottesville.

"The power companies," McCue charged, "are getting millions of dollars more than they should from consumers every year. Their rates are exorbitant. They should be cut at least 20 or 25 per cent.

"By making these excessive charges, the power companies manage to pay fat dividends on a lot of watered stock. They haven't come down on their rates in the depression. Every one knows the cost of labor and supplies is way off and the people are using as much current as ever."

Would Force Revaluation.

McCue announced he would introduce a bill under which the State Corporation Commission would be compelled to revalue all power properties at once and fix new rates. The measure would require new revaluations at least every five years.

"That's nothing more than an inventory," he explained. "We must restrict power earnings to a reasonable figure. A mandatory law is the only way to do it. I'm sure properly conducted investigations would show the valuations claimed are fictitious."

The Charlottesville delegate said he would advance a companion bill calling for treatment of corporations like individuals in tax matters. He contended they were only paying taxes on about 40 per cent of the assessed value of their property.

Truck Operator Attacks Proposed Bills

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Aggressive and organized action against legislation pending before the General Assembly which, it is charged would revolutionize motor truck transportation, has been urged upon members of the Virginia Highway Users Association and all truck owners in this section by R. G. Hilldrup, Fredericksburg freight line operator.

A bill to classify as a contract carrier any truck, farmer-owned or otherwise, which hauls occasionally for a neighbor, and to require the owners to pay fees and keep reports, is attacked by Hilldrup.

Other proposals would prohibit trucks from using the highways between midnight Saturday and midnight Sunday; would greatly increase the license fee on trucks; would repeal the present reciprocity laws of the State; reduce the speed limit on trucks, and cut the gross weight of trucks practically in half.

Charles Town Lions Plan Valentine Dance

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Plans for a valentine town dance to be held in the Thomas Jefferson Hotel here on Friday, February 16, were announced today by the Lions Club, sponsors of the dance, after a meeting last night at the hotel.

Proceeds will go to the Jefferson County Welfare Association. Dr. W. E. Trussel, Raymond Riddleberger and Thomas Moore, jr., are in charge of arrangements.

Virginia Astronomer Relates How Milky Way Is Measured

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—How the structure of the Milky Way is measured and charted was explained by Prof. Piet van de Kamp, of the Leander McCormick Observatory, University of Virginia, in a lecture tonight.

The geometric methods of ordinary surveying are used to measure stars not more than six hundred trillion miles from the earth. The diameter of the earth's orbit is taken as a known base line from which other distances are computed, Prof. van de Kamp explained.

Beyond the limit for geometric measurements, astronomers have to rely mainly on photometric methods. The distance of an object is derived from the difference between its apparent and its intrinsic brightness. This involves many complicating factors, one of which is the fact that the observed brightness of a star or cluster is easily affected by any matter in the light path.

A great range in stellar luminosity is found within the geometric distance limit. The faintest star is 50,000 times fainter than the sun, the brightest stars are more than 10,000 times brighter.

Except for objects outside the Milky Way, the nearest of which is 6,000,000 light years distant, all celestial objects fall within a relatively small and definitely bounded volume of space, Prof. van de Kamp said.

Store Is Denied Liquor Permit

Westminster, Md.; Board Holds Drug Concern Not Eligible.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The board of license commissioners of Carroll County yesterday refused tot grant an off-sale license for beer, wine and liquor to the Read Drug & Chemical Co., of Baltimore, for the use of their local store.

The action was taken at the hearing required by law before a permanent license is granted, and closely followed presentation of a petition to the commissioners protesting a license to the company.

The petition declared the company, as a corporation, is not entitled under the law to receive such license and that the company has no officer who is a registered voter and taxpayer in Carroll County or has resided in the county two years prior to the application for a license, as required by the State law.

It was brought out that the drug company, following passage of the law, had appointed Edward O. Diffendal, of Westminster, as a vice president. The commissioners, however, apparently considered this a subterfuge.

It is understood the Read Drug & Chemical Co. will appeal the decision to the State Board of License Examiners.

The commissioners also passed a ruling yesterday prohibiting the sale of beer in Carroll County on Sundays.

College Heads Rap U. S. Student Aid

Ames, Robertson Envision Inroads on Fees.

Baltimore, Feb. 7 (AP).—The presidents of two Baltimore educational institutions, Johns Hopkins University and Goucher College, have made public opposition to the plan of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration for providing part-time jobs for college students.

Dr. Joseph S. Ames, president of Johns Hopkins, urged "a modification of the plan in such a manner that privately supported institutions may be compensated for the actual loss sustained in waiving tuition fees of students assisted by Federal funds."

"If Goucher College were to accept your proposal," wrote Dr. David A. Robertson, president of Goucher, to Commissioner of Education George F. Zook, "students now registered might well withdraw from present registration with its responsibilities for fees, and reenter on your basis without fees."

Corn-Hog Program Conference Is Held

4 Maryland County Agents Talk With Economist.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—County agents of Frederick, Carroll, Washington and Howard Counties conferred today with Paul S. Nystrom, economist of the extension service, University of Maryland, and supervisor for western Maryland in the Federal corn-hog adjustment program. Plans were discussed for a curtailment campaign.

The agents were Henry R. Shoemaker, Frederick; M. D. Moore, Washington; L. C. Burns, Carroll, and J. W. Magruder, Howard. Campaigns will be conducted along the same lines as the recent wheat adjustment program.

A committee will be appointed in this county within the next two days to organize a hog-corn production control association.

Fair Gliders

Girls Face Police Court for Street Skating.

Danville, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Six high school girls were arraigned in police court yesterday on charges of roller skating in the streets. Police, alarmed at a number of minor accidents and fearing a major disaster, arrested them in an accident prevention campaign.

Magistrate Carter dismissed all the cases with a warning after reading the law and telling the girls they would be fined if brought up again.

"Does it mean we must take off our skates every time we cross the street?" one defendant asked.

"The law says you can not skate in the street. You'll have to use your own judgement," replied the magistrate.

Ranson Considers Power Proposal

May Join Charles Town's Distribution Plan.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Preliminary steps toward inclusion of Ranson in Charles Town's proposed plan of municipally distributed electric power were taken here when the power franchise committee of the Charles Town council met with the Ranson town council.

Municipal purchase of power at wholesale rates has been urged by Charles Town civic leaders, to replace the present franchise of the North Virginia Power Co. when it expires next year.

No action was taken by the Ranson council on Charles Town's proposal, other than a tentative decision not to renew the Ranson franchise of the power company until more detailed plans could be worked out.

Control of the water supply under a similar arrangement was also discussed.

Harrisonburg Church Classis Session Closes

Retiring President Says Moral Recovery Is Necessary.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The fall meeting of the Virginia Classis of the Reformed Church in the United States will open on October 24 at Middlebrook, Augusta County, it was announced yesterday at the close of the ninety-sixth annual session here.

The classis decided that in the future the annual meeting shall be held after Easter. Strong sentiment in favor of only one meeting a year was heard. For the past several years a fall and winter session have been held.

The NRA, CWA, PWA "and the other letters down to XYZ" will prove meaningless, and all the new schemes of recovery will be futile if man continues to ignore the purpose of God for His children, Dr. S. L. Flickinger, of Winchester, declared in his sermon as retiring president of the classis.

Urges Moral Recovery.

Declaring that "the present depression is the fifteenth for our Nation in the last 100 years," Dr. Flickinger asserted that "something is fundamentally wrong with our economic system," adding:

"Our failure was first moral, then financial. Our recovery must be first moral, then financial."

The Rev. Joseph E. Guy, of Christ Church, Shepherdstown, W. Va., was elected president of the classis which embraces the area from Roanoke north to the Potomac. Elder Allen B. Gray, of Winchester, was named vice president; the Rev. Roy L. Frazier, Weyers Cave, corresponding secretary, and the Rev. John S. Frantz, of Woodstock, reading clerk.

Committees Appointed.

General Synod, the Rev. Charles E. Robb, Toms Brook; the Rev. H. A. Behrens, Timberville; A. B. Gray, Winchester. Minutes of Synod, Dr. Ellis S. Hay, Roanoke; the Rev. B. K. Hay, Front Royal; E. M. Artists's Brush Records Charm Of Historic St. Marys County

"Mother" King Is Painting Ancient Landmarks for Posterity.

By Marian Butler.

St. Marys City, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—All the diligent searchers of Maryland's Tercentenary Commission have failed to bring to light sketches of old St. Marys City as she looked in her days of seventeenth century glory. Many skilled craftsmen seem to have come in Leonard Calvert's band, but no artist with pen or brush to picture this quaint colonial capital for succeeding generations.

Determined that such a "tragedy," as she earnestly terms it, shall not occur again, Miss Margaret E. King, well-known teacher and artist at St. Marys Seminary, is hard at work painting historic homes and landmarks still preserved in St. Marys County.

Gray-haired but energetic, she labors many hours a day in a tiny brick studio back of this famous old girls' school, founded here in 1839. The windows of her studio overlook beautiful St. Marys Bay, once lined with homes and taverns of Maryland's first settlers, now only a lonely expanse of water dotted by two or three quiet farms.

Has Finished Many.

"Mother King," as her students call her, already has completed oil paintings of St. Marys City from every angle and view. Her busy brush has set on canvas St. Marys Trinity Episcopal Church, built of the bricks of the old State House of 1676; the monuments to Leonard Calvert and the historic mulberry tree on which he posted his official notices to his colonists, and even the "three mulberry children," as Miss King whimsically refers to a group of trees which she has sketched as descendants of the famous old mulberry, blown down by a storm in 1876.

Looking down St. Marys River, she has painted the shores, scanned by Lord Calvert and his men from the decks of the Ark and Dove when looking for a settlement spot in 1634.

"Except for Indians and denser forests, they have changed very little," she smiles. "Though I have seen many beautiful places abroad, I think these old shores are among the loveliest. They should make this spot a heaven on earth for artists."

Broomes Wharf, belonging to Mrs. J. Spence Howard, has intrigued her brush as being close to the original landing place of the settlers. Old Church Point and Chancellors Point—so named because first chancellor Phillip Calvert chose this lovely spot for his home—are two of her favorites. But she is equally interested in painting people.

Now Sketching Workmen.

"I am starting a sketch of the workmen reconstructing the old State House of 1676," Miss King will tell you. "But I am most eager to do portraits of some of the descendants of St. Marys original families who are still living in the county, together with paintings of their fine old Colonial manors inhabited by their families for generations."

Curiously, despite her ambition to help preserve through her brush this quaint old section of Maryland, Miss King laughingly dubs herself a "foreigner." Born in Bristol, Tenn., she studied art first at Sullins College, then in a New York beaux art course, and finally abroad. She speaks French, Italian, and knows a smattering of German. An art teacher for 32 years, she has taught mostly in Virginia, having been at St. Mary's Seminary for only three years. Next to painting in oils, Miss King loves to do real Indian tapestry weaving, on a quaint loom which she fashions herself out of discarded broomsticks.

FERA Plan Is Accepted By Stafford

$2,000 Monthly to Be Spent in Relief Projects.

Stafford Courthouse, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The Federal Government's offer to extend the benefits of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration into the county, rejected by the board of supervisors at its January meeting, yesterday was accepted by the board.

Following a telephone conversation between James Ashby, clerk of the board, and Miss Ann Saunders, Virginia FERA representative, in which she explained that approximately $2,000 would be spent monthly in the county to provide medical attention and employment service, the board passed a resolution authorizing Miss Sauders to make formal application for the funds.

This will involve only $15 per month expenditure for the county to fit office space with furniture and equipment. The work will begin as soon as the application is approved.

Ray C. Hopkins, manager of the Fredericksburg district of the Virginia Electric & Power Co., and G. Fred Cooke, sales manager, formally notified the board of the new rate schedule now effective, which will mean a saving of $106 a year to the county on street lighting in Falmouth and Stafford Courthouse.

Also passed was a resolution asking the State highway department to build a footpath on the Falmouth Bridge, where U. S. Highway No. 1 crosses the Rappahannock River north of Fredericksburg.

Supervisor Newman Knight was absent from the meeting, having been confined to his home with a severe cold. The three members present yesterday included Chairman J. W. Maddox, Julian V. Brooks and Robert Estes.

Apple Blossom Fete This Year Still Undecided

Decision Expected Soon on Valley Event for Spring.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The executive committee of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, held annually here since 1924, will meet in a few weeks to decide if the citizens of Winchester desire the eleventh festival to be staged this spring and if necessary funds can be raised.

The Winchester Rotary Club expressed hope that there would be another festival this spring. The executive committee and its chairman, William E. Cooper, have made no statement, but it is generally believed that the festival will be held about May 1, the usual time.

Last year, after some doubt had been expressed as to funds, the fete was held and proved a financial success, with a sizable balance left in the treasury. It will be easier to finance the event this year, say advocates.

Draws Throngs to Valley.

Inaugurated in 1924, the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival has annually drawn more than 100,000 persons to this city, while the 11,000,000 apple trees in commercial orchards of Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania are in full blossom.

"Dad" Ryan, pioneer newspaperman during the later California gold-rush days, was the first director general. Ryan coined the festival slogan, "The bounties of Nature are the Gift of God." The 1933 festival was under direction of J. Pinckney Arthur.

Belgian Queen Last Year.

During the ten years the festival has been held, eight American, one English and a Belgian girl have reigned as Queen Shenandoah. Miss Patricia Dacre Morton, of Winchester, England, was Queen Shenandoah VIII, 1931; Miss Helen Ames Washington, of Philadelphia, Pa., a descendant of George Washington, Queen Shenandoah IX, 1932, and Miss Francis May, daughter of the Belgian Ambassador to the United States and Mrs. Paul May, was Queen Shenandoah X, 1933.

Speculation has been rife here for several weeks regarding the choice of Queen Shenandoah XI for the 1934 festival. It is understood that a South American girl, probably from Argentina, will be chosen. During past years, this belt has enjoyed an increased trade in apples from Argentina, and it is felt that choosing an Argentine girl would increase good will.

Scenic Highway Hearing Brings "Justice" Plea

Tennessee Senator Asks Fairness to State in Routing.

Baltimore, Feb. 7 (AP).—Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, argued today that the location of the proposed scenic highway from the Shenandoah National Park to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park "must be done on terms of equal and exact justice to the States of North Carolina and Tennessee."

Speaking at a hearing before George L. Radcliffe, chairman of the Public Works Administration's advisory commission, the Tennessee Sentor said:

"There is but one fair and just way to build the road, and that is, as close to the State lines as possible. If you ever depart from that you have a rocky road to travel. You haven't got the money yet."

Last of Three Hearings.

The hearing today before Radcliffe was the last of three. Representatives from Virginia on Monday gave their ideas of what routes the proposed highway should run, and yesterday a delegation of North Carolinians argued that the highway should be located totally within that State.

McKellar said he had read that public works experts visited North Carolina, and asked why they had not visited Tennessee and had not consulted Frank Webster, Tennessee State Highway commissioner.

Gilmore Clark, consulting engineer and landscape architect, employed to aid in location of the highway, interrupted with the remark that public works engineers had been in Tennessee more than they had in North Carolina and had consulted with no State officials.

Mr. Baker's Derby Gets 30th Airing Since Baltimore Fire

Baltimore, Feb. 7 (AP).—To famous derby hats may be added that one worn by Harvey R. Baker 30 years ago today.

It was on that day that Baltimore was just about wiped out by fire and Mr. Baker's derby got those holes cut in it.

Since then, each February 7 sees Mr. Baker take the hat from its secure place, inspect the holes and return it again to its place of honor.

The holes were cut when Mr. Baker just missed being decapitated by flying glass. The blast set Mr. Baker on fire, but he did not know it until an obliging passerby informed him a block away.

"I hope to have it out and look at it on the fiftieth anniversary, too," he said today. "For a $2.50 derby, it has done right well."

The Baltimore fire in 1904 destroyed 1,343 buildings in the business section at a loss of $125,000,000. Firemen from New York, Washington, Annapolis, Altoona, Wilmington and Philadelphia were called to aid in battling the flames.

Veteran Awarded $9,947 for Injury

Court Also Rules Monthly Pay of $57.50.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Charles W. Lamb, war veteran, of Greene County, will receive $9,947.50 in back compensation and $57.50 per month in the future, under a decision rendered in Federal court here today. Judge John Paul ruled he was entitled to recover this under a war risk insurance policy.

In his suit, Lamb, who is an erstwhile blacksmith and farm laborer, sought to show that injuries which keep him from doing manual labor are traceable to a railroad accident in France.

He was a gun commander with the Coast Artillery at the time of the wreck, and the injuries led to his being named a mess sergeant. He also brought evidence that he had contracted arthritis in the trenches following the wreck.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Small Latin and Less Greek.

Out of a hundred men nowadays, even though they are equipped with the handsomest of parchment A. B.'s, you will scarcely find one who deserves better than the above estimate of classical learning which Ben Jonson wrote of Shakespeare. For Greek and Latin our education has largely substituted history and economics, if not mechanical drawing and bee-keeping. Unlike the English, we no longer consider a gentleman polished and proven by his declension of "odos," his conjugation of "nequire," and consequent though not inevitable acquaintance with Xenophon or Ovid. And perhaps we are right, though as the fat old gentleman who was caught in the gate remarked, there's much on both sides.

But enterprise provides compensations. In the subject at hand, by long odds the chief of these is the famous Loeb Classical Library (Putnam, $2.50 the volume). The late elder James Loeb, of the New York banking house, provided a substantial endowment; the publishers sought out the most eminent American and British scholars; and year by year these excellently made and invaluable little volumes have appeared—already forming a vast library of translated Greek and Latin classics. The sophomore would call them "trots" or "ponies," because the Greek or Latin appears on the left-hand page, the English on the right. Yet they are serious and conscientious pieces of work, and the arrangement will help anyone who wants to limber up a rusty knowledge.

Five of the latest volumes have come in. Time was when the library started that we were greeted by established favorites, by Catullus or Aristophanes or Pliny. But with Volume 279 already reached, those fields have long since been covered. So what we have now, at latest publishing, appears at first blush rather recondite and perhaps (we suspect) very dull stuff, indeed.

I can not pretend to have read these five small but packed books, yet I've looked through them and I believe I can tell you enough to whet your interest and show that they are not half so heavy as some of the names might suggest.

• • • •

The first volume, the only Latin one in the lot, is entitled "Jerome: Select Letters." Jerome, later canonized, was a zealous Christian of the fourth century. As a young man he lived for five years as a hermit in the desert, became a presbyter and scholar, later retired to Judaea for the last 34 years of his life. He had an amazing energy for literary work—no Latin writer equals him in bulk, and Cicero, himself, scarcely matches him in range.

Most of the letters present fervid arguments for Christianity and the ascetic life. Many are to women, persuading them to take vows. Very charming is a brief one to Pacatula, a young girl. What an engaging note the first one carries through 1,521 years: "It is a difficult matter to write to a little girl who will not understand what you say."

• • • •

Jerome was the only writer of antiquity to mention Diodorus Siculus a Sicilian of the first century B. C., and author of a vast historical compilation called "Library of History." The book in hand is the first of ten volumes. In it Diodorus begins with the origins of the world, according to the Egyptians, recites the history and customs of Egypt, and gets a little way into Babylon, including the story of Semiramis, the great queen. It is slow, but good reading.

• • • •

"Outlines of Pyrrhonism" is by Sextus Empiricus, third century, A. D., and culminating authority on the sceptic school of philosophy—which taught that one can know nothing of the nature of things, hence one had best suspend judgment and remain calm. It is an extremely difficult book, full of references and counter arguments to all his predecessors in Greek philosophy, notably the stoics. Only for the specialist.

• • • •

The second and concluding volume of Arrian's "History of Alexander and Indica" (India) is very prime reading, indeed. It is our chief authority on Alexander the Great, and this volume narrates his last conquests and death, and gives a description of India and a journey from there to Persia made by Alexander's men. You will like especially his vivid pictures of elephant and tiger hunting. Arrian lived in the second century, A. D., and was a friend of Epictetus, the famous Greek stoic.

• • • •

I've saved the best to the last. It bears the fearful title of "The Deipnosophists," but that merely means "those learned in banqueting." This volume is the fifth of seven. What it amounts to is one long and gorgeous imaginary table talk between Galen, the great Greek physician; Ulpian, of Tyre, the great Roman jurist, and a number of others, about food and drink and every possible topic connected thereto. Athenaeus, third century Greek, mixed up extracts from 1,500 books and gave us the best. It is delightful.

Began coming to Congress in 1893, and after an interlude as Governor of Virginia, graduated to the Senate in 1910. Unopposed for reelections, he was credited with the political feat of keeping both ears to the ground simultaneously. Specialized on the Navy, went to London Naval Conference, and agreed to become Secretary of the Navy last March, which made way for Harry F. programs under scrutiny yesterday. The first involved dismissal of a foreman on a CWA job at Lorton Reformatory.

The foreman, W. N. Spicer, complained to Capt. Howard Clark, local CWA administrator, that he had signed orders for railroad ties at the Lorton job without proper authorization and had been discharged. Capt. Clark referred the matter to Harry L. Hopkins, CWA administrator, who in turn referred it to the PWA Division of Investigation.

Meanwhile, Thomas E. Archer and Joe G. McAlwee, charged with obtaining money from CWA workers here to "protect" their jobs, were held under $500 bond for a hearing today. Arraignment of the two was continued from yesterday.

CWA Blanks Swapped for Liquor.

To meet the increasing burden of investigating the two works programs, the PWA division of investigation has opened regional offices in ten cities. Prosecutions are expected in a large number of cases, and in one central State dismissal of a high CWA official is anticipated.

In New York, all books of the CWA administration in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens are scheduled to be investigated, while in Oklahoma investigators are working on reports of padded pay rolls. In Baltimore, a case of "swapping" blank CWA requisitions for materials for liquor is being examined. Prosecution on minor graft in CWA is anticipated in a half-dozen Eastern cities.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

A CONGRESSMAN EXPLAINS ALL TO THE WIFE.

Dear Emma: I got your letter asking me to explain the gold bill and other economic measures for which I voted and saying that you do not understand them. Well, Emma, I will try to explain them. Now as to the gold bill, it is very simple, and I am glad to make the main points clear to you. I stand firmly behind the President in whatever he tries to do. He is doing his best in a grave crisis and I am with him. By the way, I wish you would send me down another half dozen of those heavy red undershirts I wear back home, as it is not easy to buy them down here. Get them as soon as you can and send them down by parcel post.

• • • •

What the gold legislation is intended to accomplish is easily understood. Let us go back to the beginning. A year ago the country was on the brink of disaster. Something had to be done about getting more money into circulation. Our new President and his Cabinet framed a gold bill. Its aims are clear to every one. Incidentally, while I think of it, Emma, what was the name of those pills the doctor gave me for dyspepsia? I forgot them and I need them again, as the food down here is not so good. I think I left some in a small box in the medicine chest and maybe you will think to send them to me.

• • • •

Now to go into the gold bill a little deeper. First, you must appreciate that the world economic situation is chaotic. Our dollar has sunk. Stabilization is needed. Say, Emma, who do you think I ran across in Pennsylvania avenue the other day? Eb Majors. I haven't seen him in years. He says he has married again and is living in Peoria. We had quite a talk. He asked for you. I've met quite a few old friends here.

• • • •

But to clear up this gold bill and its purposes in detail. It's like this: Europe is in a bad way. We have no market for our excess crops. There is not enough money in circulation. So this gold bill was drawn up. While I think of it, Emma, if you see Seth Willetts remind him about that note. It's overdue and you could drop a hint. Did Jake Hendee come over and fix that barn roof yet? If not, call him up.

• • • •

So, the economic situation was all in a muddle, and this gold bill provides the following solution: It revalues the dollar and creates a stabilization fund, the purposes of which I will now try to make clear. We have got to have a cheaper currency. The old monetary situation was unhealthy. Speaking of health, I hope you are feeling fit, my dear. Take care of yourself these wintry days and do not overdue things.

• • • •

Well, Emma, I guess I have explained the new gold legislation and the general monetary situation so you will have no more trouble, although I can't expect you to grasp all the details the way I do, being right here in touch with things. Write me often. I miss you all the time, but in a grave crisis like this a man's first duty is to his country.

Yours with love,
GIDEON.

An Economical Car

MORE ROOM. The new Ford V-8 has more actual body room than many more expensive cars. Clear-Vision Ventilation adds to comfort. The window is all in one piece—no "blind" spots.

FREE ACTION FOR ALL 4 WHEELS. Note the flexibility of Ford Cantilever Spring Suspension. Here is riding comfort plus the proved safety of a front axle.

built for those who want the power and pick-up of a V-8

AT normal touring speed, test runs show that the Ford V-8 for 1934 will give 20 miles to the gallon. It is not only an economical car—it is actually less expensive to operate than most cars with fewer cylinders. Here are some of the reasons.

1. The Ford V-8 is a high-compression motor—the type that uses fuel most efficiently.

2. The Ford V-8 has aluminum cylinder heads—which means that, although it is a high-compression motor, it can use regular medium-priced gasoline.

3. The Ford V-8 has less weight per horse power than any car we know of.

4. The Ford V-8 has dual manifolds and dual carburetion. You utilize every drop of gasoline.

5. The Ford V-8 has automatic engine temperature control. The engine operates at the correct temperature for maximum mileage on both gasoline and oil.

Before you buy any car at any price drive the FORD V-8 for 1934.

"Japan-Manchukuo."

Japanese officials are laboring diligently to emphasize the alleged independence of Manchukuo. Publications of the two countries are filled with data intending to show that they are separate national entities. Emissaries carry the message of Manchukuo's "sovereignty" to all capitals of the world. Yet some publishers of Tokyo apparently are not aware of it.

On the theory that "neither can be understood without the other" a "Japan-Manchukuo Year Book" has just been published by an enterprising Tokyo firm. Outside of Japan, officials love to repeat the words of Ambassador Hishikari when he took up his post at Hsinking, "The basic and unswerving policy of Japan in Manchukuo is a most scrupulous respect for the independence and sovereignty of that country."

It has remained for a private Japanese firm, untrammeled by the restraints of diplomatic language, to advertise to the world what the Japanese really think of their relationship to the conquered Chinese province.

The Bewildered Father.

There was a time, not so long ago, when the law went forth from Capitol Hill and all Federal agencies, large or small, had to knock at the door of Congress for permission to exist. Now the larger the agency the less this seems to apply. Today we find the Senate politely inquiring of the gigantic corporations that are carrying the New Deal forward how they came into being and what are their powers and duties.

The Senate's request for enlightenment, which was sponsored by Senator Steiwer, of Oregon, was directed to the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation, the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Federal Emergency Housing Corporation and the Electric Home and Farm Authority. Congress has set up many antidepression agencies that are known to the public only by their alphabetical combinations. But these huge corporate bodies are not among them. Whence did they originate? How many millions are they spending? What purpose do they serve?

Some members of Congress have been astounded by their own handiwork. They left Washington last spring, after giving the President what they thought to be essential emergency powers, and returned to find great organizations that had never been mentioned in the Senate or House performing many functions heretofore left to Congress. One agency never approved by Congress is buying up vast areas of land with the view of converting them from farms to forests. Another is virtually pegging the prices of corn and cotton. Still another is taking Uncle Sam into the real estate business on an extensive scale, and the fourth is using Federal credit to sell flatirons, vacuum cleaners, electric toasters, &c., in the Tennessee Valley.

There is no indication, of course, that the Senate intends to interfere with these far-flung organizations that are operating without specific authorization. But its interest in surveying the fruits of its aberrations is comprehensible.

For Better Law Enforcement.

By a unanimous decision, the United States Supreme Court has terminated the prosecution of all cases pending for trial or on appeal under the Federal prohibition law. With irrefutable logic the court holds that "continued prosecution necessarily depends upon the continued life of the statute which the prosecution seeks to apply."

As a result of this sweeping decision, the Attorney General has taken steps to clear Federal court dockets of upward of 9,000 cases. The decision does not affect cases in which final judgment was rendered prior to ratification of the twenty-first amendment. But the Department of Justice states that it is prepared to pardon most of the small or casual offenders who have been convicted under the Volstead act. Needless to say, the decision does not apply to cases against those who have violated the internal revenue laws by illicit manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

The Supreme Court decision will greatly aid the cause of law enforcement, in spite of the fact that it decrees immunity for a certain class of lawbreakers. It will immediately clear court calendars of many thousands of prohibition cases which have clogged the machinery of justice. As the Wickersham Commission said of prohibition enforcement three years ago, the effect of the huge volume of liquor prosecutions coming to the Federal courts, "has injured their dignity, impaired their efficiency and endangered the wholesome respect for them which once obtained."

By clearing away the debris left over from the prohibition regime, the Supreme Court decision will facilitate return to a more efficacious and expeditious disposition of other cases of lawbreaking. Indirectly, too, the decision will hasten the release of most of the 7,500 persons convicted of prohibition violations, thereby emptying cells which in most cases would have been better occupied by really dangerous enemies of society.

Upheaval In France.

It would be premature for anybody to venture a guess at what may happen in France, crowd psychology being what it is, but it would be equally a mistake to assume that the riots in Paris, serious as they are, necessarily mark the beginning of a revolutionary change in the form of government. Some sort of house cleaning will certainly come, but it is perhaps as safe a prediction as any to surmise that the French will cool off, now that blood has been let, and effect the cleaning in a general election.

Several points must be remembered if one is to have a clear perspective of what has transpired and what is still in the balance in Paris. One is that rioting is the almost traditional method whereby the Frenchman in the street indicates his dissatisfaction with measures that have been proposed or are under consideration in the Chamber. It is easy to organize a demonstration in Paris; it is a method of articulation that comports with both the French temperament and French history. Since it is not only the largest city but also the capital of the country, Paris is the center of all sorts of organizations whose function is to agitate.

The very composition of the present mob indicates the diversity of interests represented and the absence of any definite objective such as successful revolutionists must have. Royalists and Communists, poles apart in their ambitions, formed the largest, noisiest segment of the rioters. They would be willing to fight each other at the drop of the hat. Veterans with their medals joined adolescent student groups, although their outlook on life is totally different. Civil servants, angry because their pay has been cut, were joined by taxpayers disgruntled because they have to pay to keep the wages of civil servants up to what they are. A motley of striking taxicab drivers, dyspeptics, and liberals indignant over the ruthlessness of the troops and police, made up the rest of the crowd.

The slogan of the mob changed with each development, indicating no solidarity, no unity. "Turn the Thieves Out!" was the original shout. "Vive Chiappe!" superseded that when the prefect of police was dismissed and "Down With the Assassins!" became the cry that ousted Daladier when he sanctioned firing on the rioters. The most reassuring aspect of the situation, perhaps, is that the demonstrators are so diverse in viewpoint, character and objective. Revolutionists must know what they want if they would be successful.

Another factor to be kept in mind is that Paris is not France. Mobs of the city have overthrown governments. But not unless there was at least a measure of support from the provinces. The stolid French peasant looks with distrust and distaste upon most of the political maneuvering in Paris and contemptuously refers to the rioting as "the fool fury of the Seine." The full import of what is happening will not be known until it is disclosed how the provincials feel.

Prospective Price Increases.

A Paris correspondent of the London Financial News says that "there might be a gleam of hope for French equanimity if the French mind could feel convinced that this American monetary policy would succeed in its aim of raising American prices. But nobody believes it can."

This scepticism is shared by many Americans who realize that in other countries currency depreciation and devaluation have not resulted in comparable advances in domestic price levels. Great Britain and Sweden actually experienced a slight decline in the level of commodity prices in the eighteen months following abandonment of the gold standard, although their currencies depreciated about 30 per cent during that time. Simultaneously, the price of gold more than doubled in terms of the yen, but the general level of Japanese prices advanced only 19 per cent. Certainly the rise in our domestic price level, following depreciation of the dollar, has lagged far behind the advance in the price of gold in terms of dollars.

The experience of France and Italy, of longer duration than that of the countries mentioned above, is even more conclusive. France devalued her currency at one-fifth of its former gold parity and Italy fixed the gold weight of the lira at slightly less than one-fourth of its prewar weight. Neither country subsequently experienced an internal price rise of comparable magnitude. Thus the balance of evidence is strongly against the assumption that dollar devaluation will necessarily produce a rise in American prices sufficient to offset the existing undervaluation of the dollar.

However, an advance in prices may occur—indeed, it is likely to take place—for reasons not directly connected with devaluation. The immense sums disbursed by the CWA, the AAA and the PWA tend to lift prices, while the psychological effect of a growing belief that a pronounced price rise is imminent may act as a temporary stimulus to advance buying. Then, too, if the influx of capital from abroad continues on a large scale, it will help to boost security prices and to support markets in which such funds are placed.

With unmistakable evidence of a world-wide improvement in productive activity at hand, American business also may be expected to participate in a general industrial revival bringing higher prices in its wake, provided no fresh shocks to confidence are administered in the near future. Another and continuing price-raising factor is found in the systematic restrictions imposed upon output under the NRA codes and the crop curtailment plans of the Government. Finally, our monetary policy has made possible an inflationary expansion of credit which, once launched, might escape from the control of the authorities.

"There are innumerable ways in which prices increases may be brought about, some of them highly desirable, others equally undesirable. None can say with any assurance which means will prove more effective in achieving the end the Administration seeks, at any cost, to obtain.

The Employment Service.

On Monday the House voted 386 to 1 to appropriate $950,000,000 for further expenditures under the CWA, an inefficient emergency organization admittedly corroded with graft and political interference. On Tuesday, by a vote of 100 to 87, the same legislative body sustained the action of its Appropriations Committee in pruning the budget of the United States Employment Service from $3,700,000 to $1,590,000. The Employment Service is an efficient arm of the Department of Labor, planned as a permanent and fundamental part of national social machinery.

The contrast between those votes is a depressing revelation of the attitude of Congress in face of the National emergency. The CWA, with its policy of wholesale doles at competitive wage rates, is popular with all who want to get a rake-off from the Government's program of financial dissipation. The Employment Service, which has been skillfully handling an imperative job without ballyhoo, advertising or breath of scandal, is victimized. If any one doubts that the real case against the Employment Service is that it has ignored the politicians, he should read the so-called arguments advanced on the floor of the House by those who successfully sought to cut its meager budget. "This is a new enterprise," said one thoughtful Congressman, "and we must guard against an unwieldly bureaucracy here in Washington"!

The penalization of the Employment Service is a biting commentary on the President's recent assurance that politics is outlawed from the reconstruction program. But the damage done far exceeds the smear given to the escutcheon of the Administration. Far more disturbing is the intimation that we have no real social program worthy of the name.

As was argued years ago in the industrial nations of Europe, when public employment exchanges were first launched, these agencies are an indispensable prerequisite to any intelligent handling of unemployment relief. Without such a system there can be no reliable statistical information on the extent of the problem; there can be no adequate check on recipients of relief to determine whether or not they are malingering; there can be no widespread system of unemployment insurance, for through what agencies other than employment exchanges can the right of the insured to benefits be properly tested?

The United States Employment Service has been carefully staffed and economically operated, as was appropriate to a long-range instrumentality. Just because it has proven efficient and careful it has incurred political hostility. The action of the House was deliberate sabotage of one of the few achievements in the field of social policy to which the present Administration can point with legitimate pride. Fortunately the Senate remains free to reverse a decision which, in the understatement used by Representative Griswold, of Indiana, was "straining at a ghat after we have swallowed many camels."

Obscuring Progress.

Those who profess to believe that as a people we are marching to some high destiny must be pretty well sobered by the headlines of the daily newspapers. If we are on the march toward a higher state of self-government our progress is often obscured by the dust we are raising.

Recent inquiries have been so fruitful that they raise the question whether a people engrossed in getting their pockets lined have any excess of time to think in terms of high destinies. A mere cataloguing of the soul-searching enterprises now under way is sufficient to make the point.

A District grand jury is investigating an alleged conspiracy to defraud the Government in the award of contracts for Army supplies. The Naval Affairs Committee of the House is uncovering data which, it is contended, shows that inordinate profits have been made on Government contracts, while the House Military Affairs Committee is preparing to follow the example.

The Black committee of the Senate continues to turn up unsavory evidence relating to the circumstances of the award of air and ocean mail contracts and to frenzied financing of airplane companies with Government contracts.

The PWA and CWA are investigating themselves and helping grand juries over the country conduct local investigations.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee intermittently turns up new evidence in its field and the Federal Trade Commission is grinding away on the charge that there has been improper price fixing in the steel and oil industries.

A little while back the President turned the spotlight upon his own ranks and disclosed the presence of what are now known as "influence lawyers," among them men who held highest the banners of crusade. Even as we probe old infections, new ones appear. It is a serious challenge to those who have our national destines in their keeping.

Letters to the Editor

Advocate of Birth Control.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Strange, is it not, how some people shut their eyes to facts? Birth control is assailed by one of them in The Post of February 2.

Look at India, where birth control is not practiced. Millions go to bed hungry each night because of overpopulation. In China, for the same reason, conditions are, if anything, worse than in India. Japan needs room for her crowded condition, hence Chinese lives must be taken, Chinese territory stolen, in order to relieve congestion in Japan. It wouldn't do to "insult" God by limiting the birth rate.

Again, children are brought into the world, reared to young manhood, and then millions of them are ruthlessly destroyed in useless conflict. This is "patriotism." To butcher men is to honor God; to limit population so that the possibility of war is minimized, lo! this to "insult" God. God cries out, "Ye make me to serve with your sins." How we like to blame the Deity for our follies! JOHN N. QUINN.
Takoma Park, D. C., Feb. 2.

Another.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read the letter in The Post of February 2, in opposition to your recent editorial on the subject of birth control. Differing from Mr. Murray, who wrote the letter, I am inclined to think that your editorial was fair and impartial. Mrs. Sanger and her followers have endured ridicule and scorn for years and are just now beginning to receive the recognition to which they are entitled.

A neutral on birth control, I am inclined to think that legislation seeking to curb the dissemination of birth control information has no place in our Federal statutes. Legislation should not be tolerated which seeks primarily to legislate morals into a people.

Mr. Murray intimates that a repeal of this legislation would be an insult to God. I am inclined to think that God was insulted when this legislation was enacted, for I believe that God would prefer that people should do His will from freedom of choice rather than from compulsion of the Federal Government. Mr. Murray intimates also that birth control is contrary to the laws of nature. However, mankind has been able to advance only in so far as it has been able to overcome the laws of nature. Charity, in which we all believe, is the direct opposite of the natural law of a survival of the fittest, yet no intelligent person would think it a sin to attempt to overcome that natural law by feeding those who are unable to feed themselves. So I really see nothing in Mr. Murray's letter which justifies an attack upon your editorial. F. WILSON.
Washington, Feb. 2

And Another.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Would you permit me a little space in your widely circulated and great newspaper to challenge a communication contained in The Post's issue of the 2d instant, signed Paul V. Murray, wherein the writer flays, denounces and stigmatizes people who believe in or advocate birth control, and inferentially condemns to hell and utter oblivion all those who even have the temerity to sanction or sponsor such reform.

It is one thing to raise a large family of children, especially under the recent adverse and depressing state of business affairs, and quite another thing to sit in a comfortable, easy chair by the fireside and write stories about how people should behave, and how many children they must bring into this world of sorrow, tribulation and unbelievable hardships, and how these children should be educated and conduct themselves during life.

If Mr. Murray had about a dozen or 15 children of his own to raise, feed, clothe, house and keep out of all kinds of mischief, it is probable that he would sing another tune. Let him go down in the mountains of Tennessee, Kentucky, the Carolinas or some of our far Western States, and get a glimpse and a whiff of the conditions among these large familied folks living in these remote parts of our beloved country. Then let him talk to some of the worn-out, haggard-looking mothers, exhausted, overworked, underfed fathers, who have been trying all their lives under the most difficult and perplexing circumstances to merely keep together body and soul of these unfortunate, blameless creatures.

I do not have any family of my own for which I am responsible for bringing into this world, but I do have a brother and a sister who have great big families, which, merely through courtesy and civility, of course, I am required to help support and educate, and believe me if Mr. Murray only had something like this to amuse himself, instead of writing disquisitions on solving the family problem, he might get some enlightenment upon the subject of birth control. It is easy to talk and give free advice when you always have before you the reality of a square meal and a comfortable place to sleep and live.

There are, of course, exceptional cases just as there are exceptions to all rules and systems, where a large family may be a blessing and a comfort to the parents; these are where a high and noble minded man of means has a healthy helpmate with fine, distinctive moral qualities as the mother of the children. But such circumstances are the exception and not the rule. It goes without saying that I believe in family life home because unquestionably it is the best method yet discovered, for the promotion of social living and the bringing out the distinctive qualities in the human race. But these families must be small and limited to the parents' ability to care for and raise these children in a proper, upright and honorable manner.

BIRTH CONTROL.
Washington, Feb. 4.

Illegally Dry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The decision of the United States Supreme Court, declaring the Volstead act unenforceable, is a striking example of the kind of local government we have in Washington.

During the time intervening between repeal of the eighteenth amendment and the present, this city has been illegally dry, owing to an arbitrary ruling of Corporation Counsel Bride, backed up by Attorney General Cummings.

It would be an insult to the intelligence and legal acumen of these estimable lawyers to believe their rulings were based on reasonable interpretation of the law or on logic or common sense. The only other answer is that the people of the District were imposed upon merely because with the Volstead act unenforceable, there was nothing to take its place and liquor could flow freely here except for the payment of the internal revenue tax. This theory is now confirmed by the Scotus decision.

Now that Congress has enacted a liquor law for the District, of course, the gap is filled, even if the dilly dallying of the local authorities prevents voteless Washington getting beer of more than 3.2 per cent alcoholic content or other benefits of repeal until about February 22 next.

Nevertheless, there is nothing now to prevent a merchant licensed to sell liquor in Maryland, for example, selling his wares to Washingtonians, and mailing delivery in Washington, pending arrival of the eventful day. Nothing, of course, except the fact that voteless Washingtonians are so used to living by arbitrary extralegal decisions by the corporation counsel, backed up by an elastic mentality at the Department of Justice and by local courts. J. P. MILLER.
Washington, Feb. 6.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications should be signed with the writer's name. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters should be limited to 300 words.

A Word to Fathers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Among the youth of today are found far too many who "scorn the base degree by which they did ascend," namely: Father.

Fathers have been practicing too much condescension. They have been too busy making a living to open their eyes and begin to take stock. Too long has the altruistic parent been deeply engrossed in making painstaking sacrifices for his progeny. He has lived in the illusory hope that the fruits of his efforts would be "like bread cast upon the waters to be gathered after many days" in the form of loving care, esteem and tender obedience.

Many fathers are doomed to a very sad awakening in all this. As has been their wont, they will have to continue to take it on the chin—heads up—since the words "appreciation" and "gratitude" are not to be found in the pages of the bright lexicon of modern youth.

As Others See It

Bureaucratic Starlings.

Washington's plan to destroy starlings which have taken up their abode at the Capitol was going along swimmingly until somebody happened to remember that hydrocyanic gas is lethal to human beings. It wouldn't be so bad if it were a playful gas warranted to knock out the starlings and do no further harm than to put a few Congressmen into a gentle slumber. But hydrocyanic is not that kind; not even a member of Congress can inhale it with impunity. So Washington has decided not to fool with it even though utmost precautions were taken that no whiff should reach lungs other than those of birds.

When every other creature is hastening in person or by proxy to the Capital for assistance, why should the birds be blamed for doing likewise? These starlings exhibit all the conventional symptoms of bureaucratitis and, as everybody knows, Washington is the one place where that affliction is a passport to public esteem.

It would astonish nobody acquainted with the intelligence and resourcefulness of their kind to hear that the starlings are delegates to a National convention who have drawn up a code and formulated plans for a pipe line into the Treasury. A gentleman from the Bronx asserts that while he was watching one of their conclaves he noticed a particularly energetic starling with a deep bass voice which sounded familiar. Upon further observation he was able positively to identify this bird as walking delegate from the union recently dispossessed of headquarters in the Bronx Supreme Court Building.

Some of the members of Congress complain that they are annoyed by the squawking and chattering of so many starlings. Thus far the starlings have not said whether they are annoyed by the squawking and chattering of some members of Congress. Instead of conspiring against them the lawmakers might with profit study their methods. The starlings at least have something to do besides to wait for orders; they do not expect word from the White House before deciding each morning what they shall do with their bills for the day.

Carlisle Bargeron

IT would seem to be most unfortunate that the incident about the removal of air mail correspondence from a lawyer's office should come up at a time when our business leaders are making heroic efforts to regain the reputation for smartness which they held for so long, but which along with the bankers they fairly lost in the depression. It will add to the cockiness of the NRA deputy administrators and the so-called Young Liberals who have been contending that the business leaders have lost all claim to smartness and the ability to run their businesses, that it is they with their brilliancy who must do the running in the future.

BARGERON.

I am not discussing the action of the air representatives in going into the lawyer's office and getting the correspondence, or that of the lawyer in letting them do it. That is something to be aired in the Senate tomorrow and very probably in the courts later.

* * * *

But a matter that is of concern to those who would like to see our business leaders regain their former estate is the time these gentlemen selected for their activity.

It so happens that the Black committee has been inquiring into the air mail subsidies for several months. It should have been apparent to every operator who had obtained or who had anything to do with a mail contract, that sooner or later the committee would get around to him.

Yet the gentlemen who are now facing contempt charges before the Senate let the correspondence with which they were concerned remain right in their lawyer's office until the committee subpenaed it. How in the name of goodness are we ever again to convince the public of the smartness and ability of our business leaders with such goings-on as that?

* * * *

For that matter those of us newspapermen who have been around here for years and seen these investigations come and go with the seizure of papers invariably forming the startling episode, have never been able to understand why those who get contracts from the Government write letters in the first place. Not only those who get contracts but who have to do with the game of politics as it is played in the Nation's Capital—why, pray tell, do they write letters?

Time and again we have seen gentlemen under fire by a committee riding along in a most smug, self-confident way. Then bang, the committee investigators would sweep down on his office and snatch his correspondence. The gentleman would then be in for considerable sun-burning. It has never failed.

* * * *

Yet they persist in writing these letters and saving them, saving them as if they were love letters. There have been instances when the committee seizers found the correspondence tied with neat ribbons, wrapped is if being preserved because of some overwhelming sentiment attached to it.

Now I have no knowledge of the contents of the letters which were removed in this case, and am not concerned in the merits of whether the removers had a right to remove them or not. But as a matter of general interest, as bearing on the efforts to again build up the illusion that our business men are very smart, why were they not removed immediately the Black committee embarked upon its inquiry? There is some explanation for the embarrassment of former Postmaster General Brown because he was right under the gun. The committee went after him first.

The other gentlemen, though, they had a warning of at least three months.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Good Thoughts in Bad Times.

This title would be appropriate for any year since 1929; but the first book with this name appeared in England in 1654. The author was the Rev. Dr. Thomas Fuller, called affectionately by later readers "Old Tom Fuller." Let us hope that the three books which he wrote may be accurately descriptive of 1930, 1932 and 1935. They were "Good Thoughts in Bad Times," "Good Thoughts in Worse Times," and "Mixed Contemplations in Better Times."

Fuller was a clergyman with a sense of humor. All his learned works are salted with humor, as where he says that it is desirable that a college president should have a little dullness in him. But not only did Fuller introduce humor into his learned works on history and theology, and also in his sermons, he brought humor even into his conversations with God—it made his prayers intimate and charming without really losing either dignity or reverence.

Lord, I confess this morning I remembered my breakfast but forgot my prayers. Yet Thou hast carefully kept me to the middle of this day, entrusted me with a new debt before I have paid the old score. It is now noon, too late for a morning too soon for an evening sacrifice. My corrupt heart prompts me to put off my prayers till night; but I know it too well, or rather too ill, to trust it. Lord, let not a few hours the later make a breach; especially seeing—be it spoken not to excuse my negligence, but to implore Thy pardon—a thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday. I promise hereafter, by Thy assistance, to bring forth fruit in due season.

Action Sought On Age Relief By Mrs. Norton

District House Committee Meets Today; Report on Alley Bill Due.

With District of Columbia day scheduled in the House Monday, Chairman Norton of the House District committee yesterday moved to speed local legislation in order to present at least two of the major pending bills for action.

She called a special meeting of the committee for tomorrow morning and instructed Corporation Counsel William W. Bride to see to it that the District Commissioners submit their report on the Capper-Norton old age pension bill for the District before that time.

Bride blamed the Budget Bureau for the delay, explaining the Commissioners must obtain permission from this Federal agency before reporting on any measure which authorizes expenditures.

Alley Bill Report Asked.

Mrs. Norton also hopes to have a report from the National Capital Park and Planning Commission on the alley dwelling bill by tomorrow so that it also may be reported before Monday.

Threatened opposition to the old age pension bill dwindled yesterday when Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, said he would withdraw his objections because Mrs. Roosevelt favors pension legislation.

A list of 144 pending District bills, most of them unimportant, will be sent to the Commissioners today, with the request that the District heads mark the measures on which they desire action at the current session.

Gasoline Tax Hearing Today.

As soon as this report is received, Mrs. Norton will ask all sub-committees to report the bills designated at once so they may be placed on the House calendar.

The Committee on Fiscal Affairs today will hold a hearing on the bill introduced by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, to raise the District gasoline tax from 2 to 4 cents. The measure is not expected to pass at this session, however.

Chairman Norton already has announced her opposition to the measure, and various civic and trade bodies today will voice objections at the hearing.

"Color" Will Be Subject Tonight.

Dr. Herbert E. Ives, well-known physicist and, in addition, an enthusiastic amateur painter, will be the guest speaker tonight at the Arts Club, 2017 F street northwest.

Interested in a closer union between science and art, Dr. Ives will deal with the use of only three primary colors on the artist's palette, where usually a painter requires a dozen or more pigments. His address is called "Thomas Young and the Simplification of the Artist's Palette," and was delivered here before the National Academy of Science, and before the Physical Society, in London.

Dr. Ives will repeat his talk before the Colorists Society, also at the Arts Club, tomorrow evening.

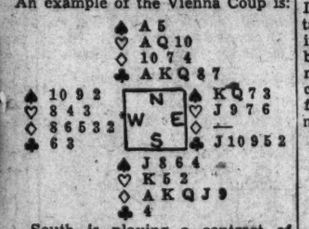
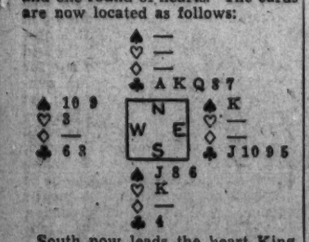
The Vienna Coup.

The Vienna Coup is a variation of the squeeze play which begins with the establishment of a high card or cards for an opponent, and later, through the operation of the squeeze, forces him to discard them. An example of the Vienna Coup is:

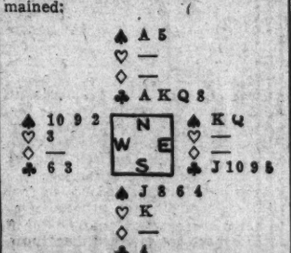


South is playing a contract of seven diamonds and thus can not lose any tricks. West's opening lead is the heart 8, and when the Dummy is spread on the table, the Declarer counts his tricks preparatory to the play. He can see as certain winners five tricks in diamonds, three hearts, three clubs and one spade—a total of 12 tricks. It is possible that the thirteenth trick may be established by ruffing a club in his own hand and establishing the thirteenth club in Dummy. This plan would be effective if the clubs adversely held were divided 4-3. The heart is won with the Ace in Dummy. However, the first lead of trumps discloses that West holds all five trumps and therefore no trumps in the closed hand can be used in an effort to establish a low club in the Dummy by ruffing one round of that suit. There remains yet one chance of making the contract, which will prove effective if East holds four clubs and also both the King and Queen of spades. It is a long chance, but East must make four more discards and no other plan offers any hope of success. At trick 3, Declarer leads the Ace of spades, thus establishing not one, but two high spades for East. He follows with four diamond leads and one round of hearts. The cards are now located as follows:



South now leads the heart King, and from Dummy discards the Club 7. Whatever card East plays must result in South winning all the remaining tricks. If he discards one more club, all Dummy's clubs are good. If he discards the spade King, South will take a trick with the spade Knave and win the last three tricks with the Ace, King and Queen of clubs in the Dummy.

This hand could not have been made had the Declarer not played the spade Ace early in the hand. If the Ace of spades had been retained in Dummy, East, discarding after the Dummy, would have been permitted liberty of action and must have defeated the ambitious contract. After seven rounds the following cards would have remained:



In this situation, when South leads the heart King and discards the spade 5 in Dummy, East will also throw a spade, and must therefore win the last trick in clubs.

Tomorrow's Hand.

Are there any conditions under which West should make an Opening bid with the hand below?

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

In 8 Months the NRA Has Commanded Millions of Lines of Newspaper Space . . . But a Few New NRA Angles Are Added in

"The NEW DEALERS"

. . . beginning next Sunday exclusively in The Washington Post, and running daily and Sunday through 31 big installments.

"The New Dealers" is, in the author's words, "the low-down on the up-and-ups in this wild political free-for-all in Washington . . the chief facts about fifty-odd important personalities in the New Deal."

In the chapter "The Industrial Ogpu" is to be found the author's story of the NRA.

Of the NRA, he says:

"The N. R. A. started with a bang, with rosy hopes and magnificent promises, but it soon became apparent that Gen. Johnson's task was no joke. He had to assure the public that this would be the greatest show on earth at the same time that he endeavored to persuade the blood-stained coal industry, the anthropoidal steel trust and the neolithic automobile business to pose as Miss America in the grand tableau at the end of the first act . . . This was a difficult job."

Of General Johnson:

"He is both an elemental force and an artist, unless the two things are identical. Despite his feverish, relentless activity, and his phenomenal capacity for getting things done, he would rather coin a good phrase, make a crackling speech or dash off a magazine article. He is an extremely facile writer, with complete mastery of more than one style . . . Business soon discovered that Johnson's bark was many times worse than his bite . . ."

Of Donald Richberg:

". . . the counsel of the N. R. A. is one of the enigmas of the New Deal. A progressive lawyer, labor advocate, writer, song-composer and fighter against special privilege, he made his mark in Chicago, first as a member of the University of Chicago track team, then as the author of the Phi Gamma Delta song, "Smoke Dreams," next—after acquiring a Harvard law degree—as counsel for the Chicago City Treasurer and Board of Assessors, then as a candidate on the Progressive ticket in the 1912 Bull Moose campaign, and finally as attorney for the Railway Brotherhoods."

Of Gerard Swope:

"He is still an industrialist, but if all American industrialists had his social vision, the reconstruction of the economic system would be as simple as a sausage. Perhaps more than any other big business man in the country he can command a hearing in the White House and in other important sectors of the Administration, and as a charter member of the Industrial Advisory Board of the N. R. A. he did more than any other man to make the big mobilization of American industry a training-school for economic statesmanship."

Of Senator Robert Wagner:

"His significance in the N. R. A. picture is that he is the first Senator at Washington who has represented industrial liberalism rather than agrarian liberalism. The loud-speakers and easy-spenders from the corn belt and cow country are ever with us. Conscious that, whatever happens, their constituents will not have to foot the bill, they have been marvelously generous with proposed appropriations and surgically insistent on drastic taxation. Hitherto, however, nobody in the Senate has represented the industrial wage-earning class, the hum-drum city-dwellers who pay both the taxes of social reform and the high costs of agrarian price-recovery."

Although "THE NEW DEALERS" is not to be regarded as reflecting the editorial opinion of The Washington Post, we have no hesitancy in asserting that no more vividly interesting material has yet been written concerning the important personalities back of the New Deal.

Mrs. Townsend Entertains at Last Program of Season.

Italian Ambassador Gives Dinner Tonight for Miss Ponselle.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The last musicale in the series given this winter by Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, presented yesterday morning at the Mayflower, was the outstanding social event of the day.

Miss Rosa Ponselle, dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mr. Marcel Grandjany, famous French harpist, presented the program yesterday.

Mrs. Townsend, charming as always, was everywhere, greeting friends and receiving congratulations on her season's concerts. She wore a handsome suit of deep red velvet trimmed with bands of sable and a hat to match.

Miss Ponselle arrived in Washington Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. George Mesta, who has been spending the winter in New York. Mrs. Mesta will return to New York Sunday, but plans to come to the Capital later in the season to spend the spring months. For the concert yesterday, Miss Ponselle wore a striking gown of black velvet fashioned on long, flowing lines, with elbow sleeves of ermine, and a small black velvet beret.

Cinema Clothes May Be Bought In Capital Shop

Milady Now Able to Choose for Self Such Gowns as Stars Wear.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

The glorious creations that make the cinema doubly interesting to feminine fans are now here in Washington. The tiger lily frocks of Katherine Hepburn, the daffy-down-dilly jackets of Constance Bennett, those fragile, frail affairs in which Garbo lures the multitudes, are being sold in the cinema shop of a local department store.

Instead of sitting in the gilt chairs of a dress salon and watching the mannequins drift luxuriously around the room while we picture ourselves in the lovely frocks, we can loll back in the cushioned chairs of the theater, lose ourselves in the screen romance, and at the same time choose our wardrobe. When the show is over it's a simple matter to stop by this unique shop and try on the gowns ourselves.

It's thrilling to see the silvery Harlow in a languid satin gown, or the gay little Fifi D'Orsay in a bunch of ruffles, and then find out how they look on us. Although the shop specializes in cinema clothes, as a general thing frocks are chosen which are not too extreme to be practical and wearable.

When the morning hours hang heavy on a shopper's hands there's scarcely a more interesting place to spend an absorbing half hour or so. Movies we've seen, and those still in the offing, are well represented here. The frocks come in a variety of sizes for the large and small, fat and thin.

But beware, those who enter here. Study your type and know it well, for in this haven or really breathtaking frocks it's easy to be swept away by their charm. However, it offers an excellent means for learning what does suit one, for on all sides are numerous styles developed and adapted for specific types. By trying on, and making mental notes, we should in a short time be able to see just how much we dare to dare.

Synthetic Crystal Gazing.

The mysterious future becomes a source of hilarity if we peep into it with the new fortune telling game. It's the sort of thing that opens up vistas of fun at a party or any informal gathering. Problems which weigh heavily on our minds, questions which confuse us, these are beautifully solved. The pertinence of some of the answers is amazing. As a little rhyme on the back of the folder claims, it "tells, predicts, advises, shocks, thrills, and surprises."

This game has a knack for turning a dull party into an interesting affair. When a group of people simply are not "hitting it off," given an amusement of this sort they will soon unbend, and the leaden atmosphere soon vanishes.

Leaves No Trade Marks.

A package of absorbent coasters will go a long way toward making a party a success for the hostess. Who among us has not undergone the misery of watching careless guests leave moist glasses on our tables, or the freshly unholstered arms of chairs and sofas? Or sometimes, if we tactfully proffer our regular coasters, we watch with terror as they stick to the bottom of glasses and fall with a disastrous crash to the floor.

These absorbent coasters blot away the moisture, and will not "stick." They come 32 in a package, and a package is only 17 cents on a special sale.

"And Another Redskin—"

What fun for the kiddies! A local shop is featuring some new Indian "warpath toys," which will delight every Junior in town. These were made by the "Ponca" Tribe of Indians in Oklahoma, under the encouragement of a wealthy philanthropist, who lives near the reservation. He had been interested for a long time in the splendid workmanship apparent in the toys of the Indian children. He prevailed upon the braves to make a large supply of the drums, tomahawks and clubs and put them on the market, arranging for the proceeds to go to the Indians.

The drums are made of thick slices taken from the trunks of trees, hollowed out and then covered over on two sides with stretched hide. The least rat-a-tat-tat on them sounds thrillingly savage.

And they might be at that. It's easy to imagine what kind of desperado Junior would be outfitted with such weapons and turned loose around the house.

Telling the Cocktail.

Cocktail shakers which "tell the tale" are among this week's best sellers in an F street shop. All around the outside are old and new beverage recipes etched into the glass.

There's no better way of increasing one's drinking vocabulary than taking lessons in the midst of the daily "shake 'em up" dozen.

The shakers come in two colors, vivid blue and moonstone. They make a delightfully novel, medium-priced gift.

Women Sponsors of Fighting Ships Gather Here

Traditions of the launching of Uncle Sam's fighting boats will be revived here today with the assembling of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy.

Upper left, a gala launching party of 1889.

Whenever a fighting boat of the United States Navy is launched, a woman plays an important part in the ceremony. Men may plan and build the vessels, but it is women who have christened them, with few exceptions, for the last century. Now, from all parts of the Nation, women who have had the honor of naming ships are assembling for the annual meeting, beginning today, of their organization, the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy, at the Willard Hotel.

The membership of 500 includes such prominent persons as Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mrs. Curtis Dall, Mrs. Josephus Daniels, Mrs. Curtis Wilbur, Mrs. James Meredith Helm, Mrs. Charles F. Adams, Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. Reynold Thomas Hall, Mrs. Ruth McCormick Sims, Mrs. Lewis Nixon and Miss Nancy Leiter.

First Christening by Woman.

Woman's change in attitude toward her place in public affairs is exemplified by the traditions of the organization, which extend back as far as 1828. In that year, according to old newspaper files, a young woman of Portsmouth, N. H., the first of her sex to sponsor a ship, proudly christened the U. S. S. Concord. Her name has been lost to posterity because, in those decorous days, a woman considered it brazen to have her name appear in the papers. But now when she christens a fighting vessel, not only is her name published in newspapers throughout the country, but her image is usually flashed on the screens of hundreds of theaters.

When the most recent launching took place, January 31, 1934, Miss Patricia Louise Platt, 1095 Park avenue, New York, cracked a bottle of champagne over the bow of U. S. S. Hull to the click of news-reel cameras and in the presence of a bevy of reporters and newspaper photographers. Incidentally, that bottle of champagne was the first to be used in a ship christening ceremony since prohibition began.

Water Called Bad Luck.

The contents of the bottle broken over the boat have been the cause of argument ever since the custom began with the christening of U. S. S. Constitution, or "Old Ironsides," October 20, 1797. A man did the honors upon that occasion. Capt. James Sever, U. S. N., smashed a bottle of wine over the bow of the frigate, according to authentic record. Years later there were several persons who asserted in no uncertain terms that water was used at the launching of the Constitution. The supporters of the wine method were willing to admit that this might be true; but, said they, if water were used, it was at the two unsuccessful attempts to get the vessel into the water; it took a bottle of choice old Madeira to put the ship afloat.

The first woman sponsor whose name appeared in print, "Miss Watson, of Philadelphia," used a mixture of water and wine when she christened the Germantown, a sloop-of-war, October 22, 1846. The Philadelphia North American, describing the ceremony, said, "Miss Watson was attired in pure white and wore in her girdle a neat bouquet of freshly culled flowers."

A bottle of wine, untainted by water, was insisted upon by Miss Nannie Seddon Dornin (Mrs. Joseph N. Barney) when she christened the Colorado at the Norfolk Navy Yard on a summer day in 1856. Miss Dornin, daughter of a Navy captain, after obtaining the wine, guarded it carefully lest something should happen to it before the ceremony. While she stood waiting for the signal to name the ship, an old salt offered to wipe the bottle off for her. But having heard of sailors' tricks she refused to let the man touch the bottle for fear he would substitute water for the wine.

Two years later the Hartford was launched at Boston in an elaborate ceremony that included three bottles of water, cracked over the bow by as many sponsors. Two of these were young women and the third was a Navy lieutenant. The bottles contained water from a river, a spring, and the sea.

Years later, when prohibition became a National law, christening with water became a necessity rather than a choice. A few ingenious persons surmounted the limitations by using nonalcoholic beverages and, in the case of airplane carriers, liquid air. When Mrs. Herbert Hoover bestowed a name upon the air cruiser Akron, she released a flock of white pigeons.

Program of Convention.

One of the first instances of birds taking part in a ship christening was in 1885 when the Chicago was sponsored by Miss Edith Cleborne (Mrs. Henry W. B. Glover). Three doves, with red, white and blue ribbons around their necks, were released in lieu of breaking the customary bottle of wine over the bow. The Japanese were the first to use birds in connection with boat launchings.

The history of ship christenings has been entertainingly told by Mrs. Helm and Mrs. Anne Martin Hall in their book, "Ships of the United States Navy and Their Sponsors."

While the sponsors are gathered in Washington for their annual meeting, they will elect officers, be received at the White House by Mrs. Roosevelt, and will attend a service at the Washington Cathedral.

Mrs. Russell Langdon, of New York, who has been president of the organization during the past year, is mentioned as a candidate for reelection. Mrs. Langdon, member of the D. A. R. and Colonial Dames, became eligible for membership in the Society of Sponsors when she christened the Rowan, a torpedo boat, in 1898 at Seattle, Wash. She is the daughter of a former Governor of Washington.

The sponsors were organized in 1907 by Mrs. Mary Campbell Underwood, of Alabama, who had christened the Birmingham earlier in that year. In addition to keeping alive the ideals of the Navy, the members are engaged in an active philanthropic program.

Chorus Girls Are 'Stabilized' By Operation of NRA Code

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Foreign exchanges may continue to fluctuate but the chorus girl has been stabilized.

After nearly two months of operation, the NRA code for the ladies of the ensemble was hailed today by the woman who fought to get it as "the greatest thing that ever happened to these girls."

"I has been a complete success," declared Mrs. Dorothy Bryant, executive of the Chorus Equity Association. "It has stabilized the professon and we are going to fight to keep it intact."

Mrs. Bryant and Eddie Cantor are up in arms over what they consider an attempt by producers to "stymie" the code that gave the girls a 40-hour week together with a minimum salary scale, and "send them back to their 93-hour slavery."

"They started trying to revise the code three weeks after it went into effect," said Mrs. Bryant. "We are satisfied that the code is a fair one, and we repeat the answer we gave over and over again when the argument that it is impossible to produce under its provisions was used on us in the Washington negotiations—any business that depends for its profits on starving and shamefully overworking chorus people had best be discontinued, and if our people must starve, must ruin their health and their future life to get in the theater, then it is far better for them now to seek some other line of endeavor."

Mrs. Bryant, who is a member of the fourth generation of a family connected with the show business, declared chorus girls are "real scrappers, and, while they won't always fight for something they haven't got, they will fight to keep what they have got."

What Today Means to You

"Aquarius."

If February 8 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 to 9 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 to 11 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 5 to 6 p. m.

If you were born on February 8, it might be advisable not to allow sarcastic commentaries to become a conversational fault. Indulging in personalities is a pernicious habit, which if not curbed grows with age until it becomes uncontrollable. Asking casual acquaintances personal questions is a sure way to produce a great deal of resentment. One should not indulge in this practice, if they desire to have friends. Persons addicted to this inquisitional form of prying, try salving their conscience and offering in the way of excuse for their inquisitiveness the explanation that the questions are only prompted by personal interest in the victim. In reality it is very bad manners to be unduly prying.

The child born on February 8, as it grows old enough to reason for itself, will insist on clear and concise explanations being made in answer to any questions that arise in its mind. Parents should not make vague or fanciful statements to children possessing acquisitive minds. It is very hard to restore a child's faith, if you once destroy it. A child's mentality is such a precious treasure, it is well to guard it continually.

The woman born on February 8 is the type that inspires men in their pioneering efforts. If born on this date, you possess the gift of being able to always have a cheerful and encouraging word to give at the right moment. You would make a wonderful doctor or nurse. You do things, not for the glory you may win, but because it is instinctive with you to be helpful. You seemingly always have "strength from on high," and are a tireless worker.

The man born on February 8 has the spirit of wanderlust dominating him. He is the type similar to his forebears, the pioneers of civilization's frontiers. If born on February 8, you love the open spaces. The life of the city at times becomes almost oppressive. It might be well for you to remember, however, we all have our allotted tasks to do, and it takes a real man who can always do his with a smile.

People born on February 8 have a very independent spirit, and resent anything that imposes a sense of restraint on them. They do much better if in business for themselves. They are much happier if constantly on the go, and any occupation that requires traveling has a very strong appeal. They do not shirk responsibilities and face difficulties with a spirit of determination to overcome them that invariably succeeds.

Crooned Telegrams Arrive--and Depart

Two Are Delivered and Then Company Calls Halt.

Chicago, Feb. 7 (AP).—President Robert Maynard Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, had an inspiration that put a telegraph company in the crooning business temporarily.

It was the birthday of his wife. In the early hours Dr. Hutchins called a telegraph company and said he wanted a telegram sent to her—but it must be sung. The girl at the telegraph office, taken off guard, said "all right."

Shortly after, Mrs. Hutchins was called to the telephone and greeted with the words, "This is the —— Telegraph Co. We have a message for you. Then over the wires came the voices of three girls singing "Happy Birthday to You—from Robert."

Mrs. Hutchins thought the idea a good one. She ordered the girls to send a crooning greeting to Mrs. Howard Linn, whose birthday occurred the same day. But John Nering, city superintendent of the company, today said crooning telegrams were an "irregular service," and hereafter the company would stick to its dot and dash business.

Customs of Ceremony Have Changed in Century in Various Respects.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Sir Humphrey Rossiter, British Home Secretary, has refused to grant a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, doomed to be hanged within a few hours for murdering Gervase Benham, friend of his wife. Returning from a visit at the Norfolk County home of Lord Edward Keynsham, he is seized by a masked band and threatened with death on an improvised gallows unless he issues the reprieve. He is placed upon the trap. A messenger arrives with word that Katherine Brandt, noted actress and wife of the slayer, is at Rossiter's home with new evidence.

Promising to hear her story, he is released. Mrs. Brandt tells him her husband shot Benham in her bedroom, then, finding his suspisions unfounded, carried the body to the study, ordering her to preserve silence. Sir Humphrey promises to grant a reprieve. She leaves and he falls into a deep faint. When he revives he learns that Brandt has been hanged.

Mrs. Brandt vanishes while on her way to attend dinner at Rossiter's home. Scotland Yard detectives, summoned to the Home Secretary's residence, find Sir Humphrey missing. Young Detective Pank seeks the mystery house to which Rossiter was taken by the masked abductors and finds that an ugly-looking man named Humble had painted sets resembling a prison in an old film studio. The owner of the studio admits that Lord Edward Keynsham had bought the building and that Humble constructed a gallows.

Pank is raised to the rank of inspector. At Scotland Yard, Lord Edward's chauffeur admits that he drove the rented automobile in which Sir Humphrey was returning to London the night he was set upon by the masked gang. Search is pushed for Lord Edward.

The two men, in obedience to a gesture from their chief, drew their chairs a little closer to the table. The subcommissioner commenced his summary.

"This is how we stand," he pointed out. "We have discovered the name of the man who planned the home secretary's abduction and put him through what I must say was a most inhuman ordeal.

"We have discovered that that same person called upon the missing Mrs. Brandt the day before her disappearance, a fact which, unless they were better acquainted than our information would seem to indicate, must possess a certain amount of significance. That man's dossier is upon the table. I will give you the salient points in a few words.

"The present Edward Keynsham is the third son of the Duke of Durham. The family is an impoverished one, but naturally Keynsham went to Eton and Sandhurst. He served with the utmost distinction in the war, receiving French and Italian decorations besides almost everything he could get from us, and but for the death of his senior officer he would have been recommended for the V. C. He appears to have been a young man of the utmost spirit, for immediately on the completion of the war, finding that there was not a penny in the family, and that every one of his brothers was struggling for a living, he went into business in the city."

Inquires About Business.

"What kind of business?" Inspector Smithers asked.

"He joined an old-established firm of produce importers and exporters," Col. Matterson announced. "They dealt in currants and spices, ginger, tea and coffee and they imported wines from every wine-growing country in the world. It was a fairly prosperous firm but perhaps a little behind the times. Anyhow, from the moment Lord Edward joined them they seem to have gone ahead in a most amazing fashion.

"This report is a very exhaustive one and I shall not trouble you with all its details, but we have here their rating at the end of the war by the Bankers Society and their rating now, and it is a fact that, while theye were in the third rank financially in 1919, they are today marked with a treble star, which means that they must be the wealthiest firm in the trade. It means keeping a balance of approximately six figures and being not considered but pronounced absolutely good for any possible engagement.

"Proof of this you have seen of course in Lord Edward's manner of living. He bought back one of the family estates in Norfolk, which bears his name, and he indulges in every form of sport. Nevertheless, he still finds time to travel all over the Continent and to keep in touch with the wine growers of every country. In short, we came to this: According to his dossier and every scrap of information we have been able to gather about him, he seems to be a great gentleman, practically a millionaire, a fine sportsman, and —to judge from his munificent gifts to charity—something of a philanthropist.

Friendly With Rossiter.

"Furthermore, he and Lady Louise are known to have been on intimate terms of friendship with Sir Humphrey. Notwithstanding these proven facts, he is the only man upon whom a shadow of suspicion rests, for the happenings we have met to consider and the mystery we have still to solve. What do you think of that gentlemen?"

Inspector Smithers considered it a poser. Inspector Pank said nothing.

"It's that young woman, the secretary, who knocks the bottom out of what might have been our first theory," the former remarked. "Lord Edward's very character, as we're beginning to understand it, might point to his taking desperate risks to save a friend's life, but when you come to face the fact that no sort of social intercourse, existed between him and the Brandts, then, where are we?"

There was a brief silence. Pank cleared his throat nervously.

"If I might make a suggestion," he ventured.

"As Inspector Smithers has pointed out, sir, one could imagine a man of Lord Edward's bravery and determination making a big effort to save a friend's life. One could also look at the matter from a different point of view. One could understand his making a similar effort in the reverse direction."

The subcommissioner was puzzled.

"I don't quite get you, Pank," he admitted.

"Before I explain, sir," the latter begged, "might I trouble you to read Brandt's dossier? You have it there on the desk."

Brandt's History.

"I ought to have done so before," Matterson acknowledged. "It is very short, however, and very unilluminating."

He picked up a sheet of paper and read:

"'Cecil Brandt, born at Windermere 43 years ago. Father the vicar there, and several of the family landowners in the neighborhood. Went only to local school and emigrated to Australia at the age of 19. From Australia he appears to have traveled a great deal in various countries and was reported to have made a large fortune in Wall street and later with some jute factories in Calcutta. Information, however, as to his doings abroad very imperfect.

Married Katherine Milsom, the well-known actress, in London six years ago. Financial reports all indicate great wealth. Bought the Imperial Theater for £250,000, and presented it to his wife on her first birthday after their marriage. Owns a racing stable, hunters in Leicestershire, has a long lease of the Powderscourt shooting and has several inquiries at the present moment with house agents for a country estate, price not to exceed £100.000. Belongs to few clubs, and appears to have limited circle of acquaintances, but attends most performances given by his wife at the theater.

"Nothing whatever known against him, except that his name has been taken on several occasions as having been present on premises raided by the police on suspicion of baccarat having been played.'

"Tells us nothing at all," the subcommissioner summed up, as he laid it down.

Visitor at Prison.

"Very little that is of any use," Pank admitted. "I should like, if I may, sir, at this juncture to mention one fact. As you have been good enough to give me a free hand, I took the liberty of going down to Wandsworth Prison this morning and interviewing the governor. I asked him if he would tell me the names of the people who had applied for permission to see the condemned man during his last few days."

"Nothing in that, I'm afraid, Pank," Matterson regretted. "I asked the same question and was told that he had seen only his lawyers."

"If you will excuse me, sir," Pank pointed out, "you asked your question a little differently, and you got the correct reply. I asked if any one else had applied for leave to see him, and I was told that not only had his wife applied and been refused but also that Lord Edward Keynsham had asked for an interview on urgent personal business, and that the condemned man had refused to see him."

"That's the point," the subcommissioner reflected. "You're quite right, Pank, I only asked what interviews had taken place."

"You will find out that it's true, sir, if you care to confirm my information," Pank went on. "Thinking it all over since, it has occurred to me that if Lord Edward was so anxious to see this man Brandt before he was hanged, and Brandt had refused to see him, he might have run the risk of trying to stop the execution, not to save Brandt's life, but to make a further effort to get the interview he desired."

Facing Blank Wall.

No one said a word. They seemed to be looking onto a blank wall. Col. Matterson held his head with his hands.

"We don't progress, do we?" he remarked gloomily. "A quarter of an hour ago we had what seemed to be the most conclusive evidence that the two men were strangers. Now, according to you, Pank, it would appear that there was some vital matter between the two. A man doesn't try to see a stranger a few days before he's hanged, for nothing."

"The person whom I should like to see in this room," Inspector Smithers observed, "is Lord Edward Keynsham."

"I hope that time may come before long," the subcommissioner said fervently. "Meanwhile," he went on, "I do not wish to increase the difficulties of the situation, but I ask you to reconsider these two dossiers—the very imperfect one of this man Brandt and the fine record of Lord Edward Keynsham. Can you conceive of any single bond which there might have been between the two, which could only have arisen or been recognized a few days before Brandt's death?"

"For the moment, sir, I must admit that I, for one, can not," Inspector Smithers confessed. "Lord Edward is not the sort of man who would be blackmailed. Besides, there is evidence that Brandt never even went to his house."

"Blackmail was the first thing which occurred to me," the subcommissioner observed, "but this fellow Brandt seems, after all, to have been fairly well liked, to have been a decent fellow and enormously wealthy. What should turn him into a blackmailer all of a sudden? The thing doesn't hold water. What do you think about it, Pank?"

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Why the Problem Child?

When a parent tries to understand why his child behaves in a certain way, he should always give thought to the personalities of the parents, including the one that is doing the thinking. In weighing the inherited peculiarities it is proper to go outisde the immediate family and to consider the gift of a grandparent. Perhaps some trait that is not easily understood is more readily recognized in the mixture of traits found in some uncle, aunt, cousin, brother, or sister.

The weighing should go beyond questions of inheritance. It should include the influence of the home. What has been the effect of association between this child and the parents, and the brothers and sisters? Is it and has it been a wholesome home for children?

Nor should the influence of playmates outside the home be left out of consideration. If the child is a little older the great influence of school, playground, and the consiederable influence of the schoolroom and teachers are to be weighed.

The term weighed is used because it is thought that nearly all parents know most of the facts and what is needed is to weigh them. The parent should do this with all the children—the satisfactory and those that present problems. If the inheritance and the home influence and training have resulted in a child with a good personality the parent has a right to the reward which follows weighing the influences responsible.

Dr. Arthur Berk and associates in the Massachusetts department of mental diseases undertook an investigation to discover just how much of the opinions such as those just given are founded on fact. They studied the parents and the homes of a large number of problem children. The general conclusion was that, in these children, some of the trouble lay with poor personalities of the parents, and some with bad home influences. If a child with such antecedents was removed from the home and kept elsewhere until his problem was solved for the time, he was quite apt to relapse when returned to his own home, or again put under the control of his parents.

In a series of 68 parents of problem children it was found that 21 had normal personalities, 9 were neurasthenics, 8 had psychopathic personalities, 7 were normal-dull, 5 were hysterics, 4 were maniacs, 1 was a paranoid, 1 was a schizoid, and 9 showed situational neurosis. Of the total number of parents investigated, 72 per cent revealed abnormal personalities. This caused Dr. Berk to recommend that when a child is brought in to a personality clinic that his parents come with him; that the study of the child's personality be supplemented by a study of the parents and of the home from which the child came; that the parents be given proper mental and social training and treatment at the same time the child is being straightened out.

Late to Bed, Early Up, And Thought Are Joys Of Greek Envoy's Wife

Mme. Simopoulos Derives Happiness From Just Thinking; Plays "Clairvoyant" Bridge and Has Been Surprised Only by Acropolis, Empire State Building and Niagara Falls.

One of the most pleasing qualities in women of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington is their constant and genuine interest in the point of view and welfare of other people. It is this quality, more than any other, perhaps, which saves them from becoming blase.

By Elizabeth Young.

Only three things have ever really surprised Mme. Simopoulos, the brilliant and witty English wife of the Minister of Greece.

They are the Acropolis in Athens, the Empire State Building and Niagara Falls.

She condones intellectual snobbery for the reason that people with brains are essentially different from those without; and her favorite occupation is thinking.

She likes to go to bed late and get up early. Her day begins at 7. Every morning she reads three newspapers from cover to cover, including the comics. She is her own chauffeur, handles her own secretarial work, does a great deal of reading and writing—and thinking—and still keeps up a social pace that would leave the average woman breathless.

"I love reading, history and biography," she said. "I used to be a great reader of novels, but I've almost given it up. It seemed so futile, somehow. Now I'm just a great newspaper reader. I read everything—even the funnies. Why? Curiosity. I want to know what's going on.

"Clairvoyant" Bridge.

"I love writing, although I've never tried to publish anything. I think writing is the greatest form of self-expression there is. One doesn't have to spend years and years developing a technique before one can begin. All one needs is a pencil and paper and to know how to spell the rudimentary words.

"I love thinking along all lines. I think all the time. I don't think I ever don't think. I might say it's my favorite occupation." But she doesn't tell just what she thinks. She thinks it really wouldn't do.

Mme. Simopoulos plays an almost clairvoyant game of bridge.

"I was afraid of that," she countered, when the reporter turned the conversation to cards. Mme. Simopoulos' name is practically synonymous with brilliant bridge in smart Washington.

"Card Sense" Misnomer.

"I play because it's great amusement and great relaxation. I don't play a conventional game. I know few rules and I don't pretend to be an expert, although some are kind enough to say I am.

"People talk about 'card sense.' There isn't such a thing. It's common sense applied to cards. The people who haven't got it call it 'card sense.'

"I've always played cards since I was grown. I'd play in Europe, but I certainly never thought I should be considered a good player in America. Bridge is played so much better here—in every class and society—than in any other country in the world.

"No, I've never had a lesson nor read a book on bridge. It would bore me to death."

Mme. Simopoulos was born in London, of English parentage. But since her marriage to Mr. Charalambos Simopoulos, who has been in the diplomatic service of his country 32 years, she has lived in Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Turkey, as well as Washington. She came here nearly ten years ago.

Meaning of Patriotism.

The Simopouloses have one son, John, now aged 10, who studies at St. Albans, in Washington. The youngster is absolutely Greek in appearance, and although he has lived most of his life away from his native land, is very patriotic.

A sense of patriotism and love of country is one of the essentials of characetr growth, in Mme. Simopoulos' opinion.

"One must have a country to fight for, to play for, to die for. One simply can't belong to every country and to no country. A country of one's own is part of one's birthright," she said.

She regards the task of instilling this love of country into their children one of the most difficult responsibilities confronting women in the Diplomatic Corps.

"When a child is for the most part reared and educated in other countries, he is apt to have a leaning toward those countries, and there is also the language difficulty," she said. "It is hard to teach languages simply by giving lessons."

Advantages of Listening.

While she thinks Washington the most delightful place in the world in which to live, Mme. Simopoulos is, nevertheless, intensely loyal to both England and Greece, respectively hers by birth and adoption.

"I belong to two of the oldest countries in the world," she said. "But I love Washington, from every point of view. We have lived here so long, have seen so many changes, I enjoy my friends, and probably have more of them here than in any other city in the world, of all sorts and kinds and classes. I like to know them all, and I do."

Mme. Simopoulos, who is not in the least blase, was saved from that tedious state by her genuine interest in those things which interest other people. Incidentally, she has discovered that a lively, listening interest in topics which absorb others, may bring one the happy reputation of being a brilliant conversationalist.

"Whether the person I happen to be sitting next to at dinner is talking about dresses, the social whirl, or sheep farming, my curiosity comes to the fore and I am fascinated by what I hear," she remarked. "I can almost vizualize it. One's conversational abilities are often called brilliant by those to whom one has scarcely said a word, but only listened."

Mme. Simopoulos is enormously proud of what her adopted country, Greece, did a few years ago in cordially receiving, providing for and eventually assimilating a million and a half refugees of Greek descent driven out of other countries.

"The entire population of Greece at that time was only about 5,500,000," she said. "If America were suddenly asked to entertain 40,000,000 refugees, it would be the same thing.

"The country housed them as best it could, in theaters, in the courtyards of museums. It seemed a crushing event at the time, but it has brought good. Some of the refugees brought their own trades with them, such as tobacco growing, pottery making and carpet making. A great many farmers were given plots of ground. Women found places in workrooms, making marvelous embroideries. They are all more or less assimilated now, making Greece bigger and stronger."

Traits of Greece Women.

Women of Greece are becoming much like American women with regard to their attitude toward life, although they have not yet invaded politics, and are very homeloving, she said.

Athens reflects to a considerable degree the so-called modern civilization. Motor cars of American make are seen everywhere, and there are many large modern hotels. But the Acropolis still dominates the scene.

"The atmosphere of Greece is perfectly limpid," said Mme. Simopoulos. "The Acropolis stands against the translucent blue sky, with scarfs of flame and gold colored clouds floating out from it. In the distance is the turquoise sea. To look at it gives the same emotion one feels when looking at a great picture or hearing good music. The sort of feeling one has in the presence of beauty, if one has any artistic sense at all."

Large Cartwheel Hats Feature Paris Display

Paris, Feb. 7 (AP).—Big cartwheel hats—the widest-brimmed day headgear Paris has displayed in years—are the outstanding note in spring fashion displays.

Black and white straws were designed with very flat crowns and 10 or 12 inch slightly rolled brims reminiscent of the gay nineties. They were worn with collarless day wool ensembles, afternoon costumes and informal evening clothes.

Feminist Finds Woman Is True Liberty Symbol

Thus exclaimed Miss Franciska Berg, leading Norwegian feminist, when she visited the United States in 1915. But since that time the symbolism has ceased to be so much of a mockery. The dream of woman's suffrage has become a reality. And yesterday Miss Berg was rejoicing over woman's latest victory at the Pan-American Conference at Montevideo.

For at that conference the equal nationality rights treaty was signed by the United States and 20 other American republics.

Miss Berg is the guest of the National Woman's Party here. She is a member of the woman's consultative committee on nationality, and is gathering information about the treaty to take back to Norway. She will urge the adhesion of Norway to the treaty.

Was Newspaper Woman.

Freedom, to Miss Berg, means many things. And her own work has been freeing hundreds of sufferers from pain. For she is one of the greatest practicioners of the science of surgical massage, and has achieved remarkable results in healing victims of infantile paralysis.

Miss Berg was a newspaper woman before she became a scientist and she has published articles about her work and about the effects of infantile paralysis in the Medical Record, and other scientific journals.

"I am interested in the emanipation of women because my whole heart and soul is absorbed in lifting women up, freeing them of any shackles which may bind them," Miss Berg said yesterday. "And although I have my work, which keeps me from taking as active a part in leading feminist movements as I would wish, my heart is with all women in their struggles."

Magnetic Power of Hands.

It was only after she had completed her course in journalism and was well-established in her career that Miss Berg took up her work in surgical massage.

"Always I have possessed very strong hands, that seemed to have a certain magnetic power," she said. "And I felt that I was not fulfilling my destiny unless I did some good with them. So I studied and added the skill of science to my own knowledge. And I am glad to say that I have done much good."

Since taking up the study of surgical massage Miss Berg has effected many remarkable cures. She told of a young Norwegian girl who fell in a swimming pool and suffered a broken vertabra. The girl's parents were among the wealthiest in Scandinavia and they obtained the best doctors and surgeons to attend their daughter.

"Yet they were unable to cure her, and finally called me in," Miss Berg related. "I treated her for several months and today she is almost completely recovered. I hear that she is soon to be married. That makes me very happy—to have helped that young girl."

Chef Manon is not only a chef but a soldier, and to some extent a journalist. He admires a dusty bottle of sparkling apple cider from the cellar of Wardman Park Hotel, and approves the fact that the New Deal will bring back the wines and liquers that add color to culinary works of art. Above is the title page of his journal, which contains not only recipes, but comments on America, descriptions of the war, New Year's resolutions and even a poem. He says some day "I will go up in the woods somewhere to catch up in my writing."

Merry Marius Manon Found Fun in Fighting, Especially When Grasshopper Knocked Him Out

How Could He Know it Was Only an Insect When Shells Were Crashing All Around? Tattered Volume He Treasures Contains Thoughts on Things From New Year Resolution to Recipes and He Gives His Favorite, for Crepe Suzette.

By Susan Mills.

"Come down to my office—I call it my war office. They are tearing up the kitchen here to make it bigger—but now there is an awful mess."

Chef Manon, of Wardman Park, waved an expansive hand in the direction of broken plaster and sawdust. "Soon I'll have better headquarters."

He led the way to his office, drew up a chair for the reporter and sat down before his desk.

"I want to show you something." His round face lighted up, his gray mustache bristled with excitement. "I have here a book—it has been all over the world—Cuba, Algeria, Germany, Spain, it has been to war with me—I threw it in my suitcase when I came to America."

He drew it out of the drawer of his desk—a black-bound, tattered copybook with yellowed pages closely written. On the front page was the inscription, written in an exquisite script:

Champagne at 15 Cents.

"I started this book when I was 12 years old, an apprentice," he explained. "It contains all my recipes—look, some New Year's resolutions, and all about the war—I was in the American Army—and here even a poem. I guess I am a little fool—I write even poetry!"

He flipped the pages through.

"Why does the handwriting change so? Oh, that is America—I am in a hurry here. I tore out one page of the book; it is a recipe for champagne—I want no one to get it.

"I make the most wonderful champagne, with all the herbs, and everything. I can make a quart for about 15 cents. They charge $4 or $5 a quart now—poof! I make it for only 15 cents!"

He moistened his thumb with the tip of his tongue, and turned the pages again.

"Ah, here—the war! see—'Resume des Exploits du Soldat 2e Classe, Maruis Joseph Auguste Jules Manon, 27 Division de Combat Armee Americaine 1e Citation.' Yes, I am all those names.

"I enlisted in the army after I was chef of a big club in New York. When I went over on the boat they gave the soldiers very bad food.

"Well, they ask me if I could cook—me, a chef! I tell them no, I can't cook. Then, can I butcher? No, I can't butcher. Well, what can I do? I can wash the icebox and keep the kitchen clean, I tell them.

"So I washed the icebox, and when I can I go up to my buddies and whistle. They come down, and we have a grand feast, with wines and pastries. We put it over, no?

"I was a runner over there for some months, then I got a bit of shell in my leg, so they put me in charge of the food.

"Once I made French pastry for the officers' mess. I got a little flour nobody could use, a little margerine, a little cooking oil, and some marmalade. I rolled out the dough, put in the marmalade, and made little turnovers—you call them? So I brought in a pile of real French pastry, the best I ever made in all my life, and the officer wanted to know, 'Did you make that?' So everybody forget all the bombarding in the sky and came over to see and taste my pastry.

Longest Bar in World.

"Mm-m—let me see—yes, here I speak about the longest bar in the world. It was at the front—a bar 2 miles long. We soldiers were not allowed to go and get any wine, so the peasants came up the road with their wagons of wine. There was a long fence of barbed wire, and 20,000 soldiers stood on one side and the peasants on the other, and the wine was passed through. The soldiers went mad, they sold their shirts, their shoes, anything to get wine. Oh, what a happy time it was!"

He laughed, freely, heartily.

"Ah, there is nothing in life like a good laugh. I never worry—sometimes I can't help it—but I never worry when I can help it.

Felled by Grasshopper.

"That is the thing about war—you never know when you will get killed—you never know. So don't worry. Once I was standing in a field watching the shells explode in the sky. It was beautiful. I stood there and looked, and bits of shell started to fall. I wasn't wearing my tin hat—and suddenly something hit me on the head. I fell down, and said to myself, 'Marius, you're gone!' I lay there a moment, and I discovered I wasn't gone—I found that a grasshopper had jumped on my head! You see, I was so nervous.

"I have everything in my book—my New Year's resolutions—I resolve to tell the truth, it is a new habit with me—I resolve I shall not get fat—and look at me now! I resolve to remember my resolutions—well, I can not remember everything.

"I will give you the recipe for Crepe Suzette. I call it New Deal because one can use now all the liqueurs and cremes that the New Deal has brought us. I named a soup Cream of Barley Marie Louise after my little girl, because it is one of my favorites. There should be a reason for the names, no?"

Crepe Suzette for Four.

Mix one cup sifted flour with two tablespoons powered sugar and grated rind of one orange. Add one pint of cold milk and stir until smooth. Add three eggs and beat thoroughly Pour a little melted butter into a small frying pan and when hot drop in just enough mixture to make a very thin pancake. Cook on one side and when the edges are coloring turn and cook on the other side a very few seconds.

Crepe Suzette sauce—Cream two ounces of sweet butter with two tablespoons powered sugar and one-half cup curacao or any other liqueur you prefer. Pour over pancakes and serve very hot.

School Proves Needle Best Ally of Girls Seeking Work

St. Rose's Trains Scores for Jobs and Makes Clothes for Noted Patrons.

The needle is still one of woman's most important allies in earning a living. Even in recent days of economic distress, it was easier for a young seamstress than for a business girl to find work.

This was proved repeatedly by the pupils of St. Rose's Technical High School, 1878 Phelps place, which is under the direction of the Sisters of Charity. All of the 80 or more girls who attend St. Rose's are from orphanages or from economically distressed homes. These students give more serious thought to the business of earning a livelihood than carefree high school pupils. When a girl has finished the course at St. Rose's she is supposed to begin making her own way in the world.

Many Positions Filled.

"That is why we are glad when the pupils decide to major in sewing," said Sister Mary, head of the sewing department, yesterday afternoon. She was surrounded by dressmakers' dummies partially clothed in garments that were in the making and by busy young seamstresses. On one of the tables lay a shimmering blue satin dress with the basting threads still in it. The blue dress is being made by the pupils for a customer to wear at a White House reception.

"We seldom have difficulty in finding a good position for a girl who takes the full sewing course of four years," continued Sister Mary. "Many of Washington's finest shops call us when they need seamstresses for their dressmaking and alteration departments. Some of our graduates have opened dressmaking shops of their own and have been very successful."

Prominent Patrons.

Many prominent women have visited the cozy sewing room at St. Rose's. Mrs. Ogden Mills recently had so much table and bed linen made there that it took several girls working steadily for almost a year to accomplish the task, which included delicate drawn work and handsome monograms. Mrs. Harry S. New, wife of the former Postmaster General, has had many of her linens made at St. Rose's. When Countess von Bernstorff, wife of Germany's Ambassador to the United States at the time we entered the war, returned to Europe with her husband, she took with her quantities of linens made by the schoolgirls under the supervision of the sisters.

But not all of the exquisite stitches go into such practical things as tablecloths and pillowcases. St. Rose's young seamstresses made a yellow silk dress with hemstitching for Ethel Roosevelt (Mrs. Richard Derby), to wear at a debut dance. Lady Isabella Howard, wife of Great Britain's Ambassador to the United States a few years ago, had a number of her clothes made at the school.

Business Is Improving.

Other members of the diplomatic circle who have had costumes made at the school are Mme. Jusserand, wife of the former French Ambassador, who was doyenne of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington for more than a quarter of a century, and Mme. Riano, wife of the former Spanish Ambassador, also doyenne of the corps at one time.

The sisters and their industrious young dressmakers welcome orders from anyone for clothes or linens.

"The money we make by sewing is used to support the school," explained Sister Mary. "This year we didn't make enough and the Community Chest had to help us."

"But business is improving," said Sister Catherine, smilingly. "We have a great many orders on hand now—more than we've had for four or five years. I think it is because there is more gayety at the White House now than in the last few seasons. Whatever the reason, we're glad our girls have enough to do to keep them busy."

Prince Tokugawa Plans Journey to Washington

Venetian Girls Hunt Mates in Gondolas

Venice, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Twelve weddings will be the result of a score of girls, bent on finding husbands, riding the canals in heavily beflowered gondolas, reviving traditional Venetian marriage custom.

In days of old, the doges of the city believed in matrimony and "more babies," just as Mussolini does today. To encourage marriages, the doges used to assign a dowry to 12 girls chosen from among many candidates. The fortunate young women were then paraded in a richly decorated boat through the city canals to attract the attention of all eligible young men. The ceremony unfailingly occurred on the feast of the Purification of the Virgin.

The marriage hunt was commemorated every year uninterruptedly from 944 A. D. until the fourteenth century, when Venetian girls became self-conscious and shy and refused to submit to the "humiliating" public search for a husband. It was then thought to replace the girls by dummies, but the attempt proved a failure.

Wilde Play Planned By Bristol Thespians

Bristol, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The recently organized Bristol Community Players will give their first play in Bristol February 16, under auspices of the Bristol Kiwanis Club. Although their organization is only a few weeks old, the players have met with much encouragement and assitance in their plans to provide Bristol with more and better stage productions.

The initial production is Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being in Earnest." Miss Louise Brewer, prominent in Bristol theatrical circles, is supervising director.

Hair Should Go in Training For That Spring Permanent

Best Results Can Not Be Obtained If It Is Out of Condition.

The time is drawing near for spring permanents. If you are planning on having one it would be wise to start getting your hair in condition now. The success of a permanent depends largely on a good healthy scalp and head. If the hair is extremely dry a permanent tends to make it brittle and straw-like. The oily type often fails to take a deep wave. Dandruff becomes more conspicuous after a permanent.

A series of scalp treatments several months before a permanent will help put the hair in condition. Brisk brushing of the hair and massaging of the scalp to stimulate circulation will bring the hair back to life and make it gleam.

Every night before retiring devote 10 or 15 minutes to properly brushing the hair. Massage the scalp two or three times a week, and at least once a week give yourself a hot oil treatment. Shampoo the hair the next morning. Keep this routine up for three or four weeks and you will be surprised at the improvement.

Physical ailments, lack of sleep, indigestion and nervousness cause the hair to be dull and lifeless. An oily condition of the scalp is often caused by excessive fats in the diet. It is not wise to get a permanent if one's health and hair are below par.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

Not having made a screen appearance since her 1932 performances in "Grand Hotel," in association with an impressive roster of other stars, and "As You Desire Me," her own individual vehicle, Greta Garbo bids fair to create something of a sensation when she comes to the silver sheet at Loew's Palace in "Queen Christina," following the current engagement of Constance Bennett in "Moulin Rouge."

When accorded a preview showing for the benefit of the local dramatic desks in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon, "Queen Christina" revealed itself as an historical drama executed in the grand manner and interpreted by a cast of the first rank.

As an exhibit of regal splendor, the pomp and circumstance of royalty on the throne and the mammoth pageantry of great events it is no less pretentious than "Rasputin and the Empress" and, as far as one may judge, no less accurate in its presentation of personages and events of an older day than, say, "The Private Life of Henry VIII."

A Tragic Romance.

The story is one of tragic romance, leavened with occasional touches of humor and not infrequent flashes of human nature that is common alike to sovereign and serf.

The narrative does not plunge itself immediately into the sweep and rush of turbulent drama, but, on the contrary, suffers a little in the beginning from indirection and an episodic treatment that builds neither firmly nor well. Once the Spanish Ambassador, impersonated by John Gilbert, appears on the scene, however, the movement of the plot becomes definite, forceful and cumulatively effective.

There are moments in the picture when Garbo is at her worst photographically. These, happily, are in the minority and are wholly forgotten in the light of the radiant beauty with which she imbues the final tragic scenes of the film. The film fades out on the face of a Garbo that is heroically and magnificently beautiful.

Superb Support.

The supporting cast has been selected with rare discretion, including such substantial artists as Lewis S. Stone, C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Owen, John Gilbert and Ian Keith, with Elizabeth Young, Gustav Von Seyffertitz, David Torrence, Fred Kohler, Ferdinand Munier and Georges Renevant in secondary assignments.

The photography has been especially well attended to by William Daniels, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's ace in such things, and Rouben Mamoulian has outdone himself in the matter of direction in the picture's later sequences.

If this seems like a complete and detailed review ahead of its appointed time, it should be known that these few cursory remarks scarcely scratch the surface of all that might be said of so grandiose and gorgeous a production as "Queen Christina."

The formal review will come along in due course—and don't say we didn't warn you!

The "whispering campaigns" concerning which there have been so many bitter complaints in our theaters of late are not confined to the motion picture houses, in the usual sense of that term. Yesterday afternoon at Burton Holmes' final lecture of the season on "The New Italy" at the National, so many of his hearers evidently had been over the same ground that infinitely more "lectures" on the screened views were delivered out front than the ostensible speaker of the afternoon was able to negotiate from the stage. Yesterday's audience was probably the least considerate of its own numbers of any attracted during the five weeks of Mr. Holmes' brief season.

Now It's Novarro!

It is very evident that some kind of jinx presides over the week of February 23 at Loew's Fox Theater.

Originally it was rather more than hinted that Lionel Barrymore—already numerously announced and withdrawn—would occupy that date as chief luminary of the F street stage. Although he has approached as near as Baltimore, the Washington booking was canceled, for the time being at least, to make it possible for May Robson to appear then in person in conjunction with first Washington screenings of her latest picture, "You Can't Buy Everything."

Now that booking has been abrogated, both as to the veteran Miss Robson's personal appearance and the tentative screening of her new vehicle.

As this is written—but with no definite guarantee from this department for very much longer than that!—the double attraction at the Fox the week of February 23 will be Ramon Novarro, in person, on the stage, and the M-G-M picturization of the Jerome Kern-Otto Harbach opera bouffe, "The Cat and the Fiddle," on the screen, with the youthful Senor Novarro and Jeannette McDonald costarred.

Many, no doubt, will look upon this otherwise than as a deflation of the week's prospective allurement.

Mothers who may be lamenting the fact that their small sons have such large mouths might pick up some easy money if they have a 3-year-old among them with a mouth even vaguely approximating the dimensions of Joe E. Brown's capacious maw. Warner Brothers are offering a job to any 3-year-old youngster who can fill the bill. In other words, they would like to hear from a maw who has a kid with a maw—which sounds a good deal simpler than it is, take it from them!

Premiere at National.

A seeming hiatus in the bookings at the National Theater was overcome yesterday when Mr. Alfred Head, one of the more indefatigable of the New York Theater Guild's itinerant publicists, arrived in the Capital to herald the coming on Monday, February 19—which would be immediately following the week's engagement of Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner in her unique character sketches—of John Wexley's new play, "They Shall Not Die," for its first performance on any stage.

Mr. Wexley will be recalled as the author of "The Last Mile," a melodrama of the death house, and "They Shall Not Die" will be identified in many minds as the play he has fashioned upon the topic of the Scottsboro case, in which the death penalty was imposed and made the subject of heated legal controversy.

Final Subscription Play.

The principal roles in the new play will be in the competent hands of Claude Rains, last seen here in person when he succeeded Earl Larimore as Wang Lung in Owen Davis' dramatization of Mrs. Pearl S. Buck's "The Good Earth," with Mme. Alla Nazimova, and more recently on the screen in Universal's unique picturization of "The Invisible Man," and Linda Watkins, the young actress who appeared successfully in "June Moon," A. A. Milne's "The Ivory Door," and revivals of Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" and "The Lady of the Sea," and then discovered that Hollywood was not at all to her liking.

"They Shall Not Die" will be the final subscription play of the season of the American Theater Society of Washington, being the third of the three Guild plays promised, and the sixth, all told, of the half dozen articled for the Society when the subscriptions were sold at the beginning of the season.

John Wexley will be present in the National on the opening night of his play and probably will remain in Washington until it is entirely to his satisfaction.

When "The Lost Patrol" opens at RKO-Keith's tomorrow, Washington will have its first glimpse of one of the most unusual film plays of the year. This picture, which as a silent was held in the same esteem by British theatergoers as "The Covered Wagon" was on this side, is based on a novel by Phillip MacDonald. It was adapted to the talking screen by Garrett Fort and directed by John Ford. It is primarily remarkable because it rivets the attention and holds the interest of all types of amusement seekers despite the fact that there is not a feminine character in the cast. The cast is composed entirely of men and the story deals with an off-the-record episode in the World War, with its locale in the Mesopotamia Desert. Victor McLaglen is starred, with Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford, Alan Hale, Reginald Denny, Billy Bevan, J. M. Kerrigan and numerous others of note in support. "The Lost Patrol" is described as a picture of "sinister novelty." If advance reports are to be credited, it will be well worth seeing.

Mystery Solved!

Reverting briefly to Greta Garbo and her director, Rouben Mamoulian, involved somewhere in these vagrant notes in connection with an imminent magic lantern show called "Queen Christina," the mystery surrounding their purported motor trip through the Mojave or other Western desert recently and a subsequent "disappearance" from Hollywood aboard a New York bound train, remains as deep and baffling as ever.

Mr. Mamoulian, the Russian-born Armenian, arrived in New York yesterday. No Garbo, however, put in her appearance.

To interviewers who questioned him minutely concerning rumors that he and the star were engaged, Mamoulian was particularly illuminating. The conversation is reported to have run something like this:

"Do you know where Miss Garbo is?"

"No."

"Is she coming to New York?"

"Where is Miss Garbo now?"

Dodging "Permeer."

Mamoulian, it developed, had a vague idea that Miss Garbo was still in Hollywood, trying to think up good excuses for not attending Sid Grauman's "permeer" of "Queen Christina."

"As for reports we are to be married," he said, "let me say that I am unmarried and have made no plans to marry."

So now you know. Or do you?

Just Reeling Around!

At 12:30 p. m., "Queen Christina;" at 4:40 p. m., Burton Holmes' "The New Italy;" at 11:15 p. m., "Palooka," starring that king of the great lovers, Mr. James Don Juan Casanova Durante. How would it be to borrow the old family album to look at a few pictures?

Impersonates Her Native Royalty

Past Glories Cited To Virginia City

Paris League Head Lauds Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—The world significance of Fredericksburg's influence on early American history and the honor that means to this city today were the keynotes of an address by Pierre de Lanux, for nine years director of the Paris office of the League of Nations, at the State Teachers College here.

The speaker, a guest of the International Relations Club of the College, declared he was particularly determined to come to Fredericksburg because of his interest in history.

He explained details of the organization of the League of Nations. Despite setbacks received through the action of a few nations, the league remains the ideal of future conduct among nations and represents the model upon which at a more advanced period international conduct will be based, he said.

Munition Makers Held Seeking War

Educator Calls Profits of Armament Major Cause.

Bridgewater, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—President Charles Calvert Ellis, of Juniata College, Pennsylvania, in an address last night formally opening the annual Spiritual Life Institute of Bridgewater College here, charged that "war has been fostered and is being fostered at this hour by the great munitions makers of the world."

"If the people of the world would insist there should be no private profit in the making of armor and munition, this would go far toward eliminating one of the great causes of war," Dr. Ellis said.

The Spiritual Life Institute will continue through Saturday. Many notable ministers and laymen are on the program, including Bishop F. D. Goodwin, of Richmond.

Burton Holmes Talk on Italy Closes Series

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

"THE NEW ITALY."—Fifth and last of a series of five Tuesday afternoon travelogues by Burton Holmes, illustrated with motion pictures by Andre Lavarre and the L. U. C. E., through courtesy of E. B. L., and colored slides by Mildred Petry. At the National Theater.

By Nelson B. Bell.

As if with the deliberate intention of saving the best for the last, Burton Holmes yesterday afternoon, in the National Theater, charmed the largest audience of his 1934 season with an especially delightful composite of the old and new Italy.

Prefacing his lecture by a brief explanation of how and why he had deviated from his original plan of confining his "Italy" to the ultra-modern developments of the Mussolini regime, Mr. Holmes deftly interspersed with eloquent pictorial evidences of the progressive activities of the present Italian government many magnificent relics of the more-familiar Italy of antiquity, romance and the arts.

His tour began at the dock of the Conte de Savoia in New York and ended with the docking of the Rex at the same pier. Between these colorful scenes of giant liners departing at night and arriving in midday were interlarded intimate excursions into the ancient beauties of Naples, along with its modern improvements; a hazardous jaunt to the new crater of Vesuvius and down to Pompeii; picturesque glimpses of Amalfi, the Cappuccini Monastery, Sorrento, Capri, the royal palace of Caserta, the Pontine Marshes en route to Rome, the thriving city of Littoria, the summer palace of the Popes and the recovered barges of Caracella.

The tour of Rome was comprehensive and interesting in its contrasts of the old Rome of familiar picture and legend and the modern new metropolis that has taken form under the guiding hand of Il Duce. The glories that were Rome may not now be said to outshine the glories that are the Rome of this new Caesar.

The portion of the talk following the intermission pursued a course of increasing interest and beauty. Vatican City revealed its little-known community as a modern and thriving, if tiny, independent State; Venice took on new glories and new splendor and an extensive examination of the Italian lake country disclosed an unending vista of magnificent effects in which were combined the limpid loveliness of the lakes, the majestic grandeur of the former Austrian Tyrol, now Italian territory, and by a quick trip to Sicily the rugged beauty of that luxuriant isle.

Considerable stress was laid by the speaker upon the provision that has been made for the development and useful occupation of Italian youth under the strict discipline of the Mussolini government. Much prominence was given, too, to the proud and imperious paternalism Il Duce exercises over all of his people, of all ages and all classes. The iron-jawed dictator glowered from many scenes upon many multitudes.

"The New Italy" by its beauty, diversity and informative value takes rank as by far the most engaging travel talk in the 1934 Burton Holmes series and will emphasize in many minds the regret that the series has come to a close.

City Attorney Lee Bushong declared the town could legally collect such taxes, but that their payment did not exempt machine owners from criminal prosecution for operating the devices.

The council also voted to demand that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad install a safety signal at the George street crossing.

New Prison Jobs Declared Urgent

In a communication to the House appropriations and Senate finance committees here he said these employment-making enterprises are necessary to safeguard the health and morals of the prisoners and to prevent loss of money, property, and life.

He pointed out that 2,000 convicts on the road force would be idle after July 1, and termed this another difficult problem for solution.

Virginia Man's Trial in Shore Murder Starts

Princess Anne, Md., Feb. 7 (Æ). Earl Collins, of Groton, Va., went on trial today on charges of murdering Mrs. Norris Taylor at Crisfield early in December.

He pleaded not guilty and selection of the jury was begun. The case followed the acquittal late yesterday of Sam Jones, Negro, charged with murdering Mrs. Margaret Brumbley.

Not Wanted Elsewhere.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.). The Department of Justice at Washington has informed police here that Elmer Halderman, alias George W. Vincent, who was wounded and captured when surprised by police while allegedly attempting to crack a safe in the office of a bottling company here, is not wanted by police elsewhere. Halderman is being held for the grand jury.

Police Capt. Clarence E. Emmert, announced that A. J. Jones, Halderman's companion, had been turned over to Ohio police.

Court to Hear Teacher's Suit.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.). Legal action lasting more than 16 months, which originated in the dismissal of Mrs. Olive E. Ehrhart, Hampstead school teacher, on June 8, 1932, may be climaxed during the February term of the Circuit Court for Carroll County which convenes Monday. A suit filed by Mrs. Ehrhart against the Board of Education for one year's salary will be tried.

Mrs. Ehrhart, who began teaching in 1921 in the Mount Airy High School, filed a petition in the circuit court in October, 1932, in which she alleged that the dismissal was not valid and set forth a number of charges.

After a hearing before Judge William H. Forsythe, jr., the circuit court ruled that it would not permit the action of the board to stand, and referred the matter back to the board for trial upon any specific charges that might be brought against her. However, an appeal was filed with the State superintendent of schools, who dismissed the charges.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—A jury in Circuit Court of Frederick County here yesterday sentenced John O. Bailey, Luray, Va., salesman, to three months in jail and fined him $100 on a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. It was Bailey's third conviction on that charge.

Few Rum Cases in Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Only a "mere handful" of liquor cases will be struck from the docket of United States District Court here by reason of the Supreme Court decision that persons charged with violating the National prohibition act can not be tried in Federal courts, Joseph M. Chitwood, U. S. district attorney here, said.

Only a few cases have been made by Federal agents here since last July, when the local force was dropped. At the January term of Federal Court, Judge John Paul postponed about a dozen cases.

House Opposes Rum Amnesty In W. Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). A resolution recommending the release of prisoners serving terms in Federal prisons for violation of the National prohibition act, apparently was defeated today in the West Virginia House of Delegates.

In order to afford Delegates opportunity to explain their positions, the announcement of the vote was held up until tomorrow.

Members of a joint committee named to tackle the problem of a balanced State budget today said the new State revenue bill being prepared for the Legislature will embody a State net income tax replacing the gross income tax; increased levies for utilities, and miscellaneous taxes, but not a sales tax unless other taxes are found inadequate.

Court Ruling Awaited.

The bill will not be submitted, however, until the supreme court passes upon the validity of the Hiner tax collection bill, which is designed to release $25,000,000 in impounded property taxes.

The House of Delegates already has approved the next income tax measure, which repeals the gross tax. It has indicated its opposition to a sales tax in refusing the direct preparation of such an impost.

J. B. Sweeney, of Wheeling, State manager of the Equitable Life Insurance Society warned the Legislature today at a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee that he would advise against any more realty loans in the State if the foreclosure moratorium bill is passed. His company, he said, has loaned $41,000,000 on State realty in the last 15 years.

86 Bills Already Passed.

Of the 374 bills introduced in the Legislature since its present extraordinary session began November 21, 279 were House bills and 95 Senate bills. Of the 86 bills passed by both houses, 63 were House bills and 23 Senate measures. In addition, the House has passed 47 bills which have been sent to the Senate, not yet been passed in that body, but the House has only 4 Senate bills which is has not considered.

100 Berkeley County Adults Back in School, and Like It

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). An enrollment of 100 students in the adult education classes established in Martinsburg and Berkeley County one month ago, was announced today. The classes are financed from relief funds.

The work is concentrated in three city school buildings, which are also used for children's day schools. Teachers otherwise unemployed but holding full credits are doing the teaching.

Typewriting and bookkeeping classes had an average attendance of 25 students through January; recreation and music, an average of 40; English, arithmetic and public speaking, an average attendance of 45. Each of the courses is taught on two nights each week.

A lecture on governmental economics, given each Thursday by Paul McKown, has attracted wide interest. A mass meeting of most of the adult education students is held each Friday at which a local authority speaks on topics of the day. Some of the classes prefer to do class work rather than join the public session. This is optional with the class. Classes are held each night in electricity and allied lines, such as radio and woodworking, with an average attendance of around 40 per night.

Even the general educational classes in the county have sustained attendance and interest.

A "singing school" which meets at various places in the county, directed by Miss Elizabeth Miller and Miss Ruth Hollis, is drawing increased numbers and interest. The average attendance is 25.

Leo Keesecker is teaching ten "shut-ins" who are unable to attend school, visiting them at their homes.

Twelve instructors are now at work, two of them as volunteers, without salary. Berkeley County's FERA quota of $590 monthly is divided between the ten teachers on salary, less such small expenses as must be deducted. Salaries so far have ranged from $60 to $70 each. The $590 monthly is expected to continue until May at least.

Ballou Opens City Schools To CWA Art

Scholarships Revealed; Luncheon Director Studies System.

Display of works by CWA artists in District public schools was assured yesterday when the Board of Education, on recommendation of Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, instructed its committee on buildings and grounds to select suitable pictures from the CWA products for use in schoolrooms.

Dr. Ballou told the board that an inspection of artists' work at the Corcoran Gallery of Art had convinced him that some of the paintings are suitable to schools. He declared that he has always felt that the Board of Education should cooperate with the Public Works of Art project.

When the proposal was first made that pictures of the CWA artists be placed in schools, considerable friction arose. School officials contended that they had no right to decide the matter and that it devolved on the District Commissioners to determine whether classrooms should be decorated.

Conference Ends Problem.

This uncertainty was removed through conferences between Public Works of Art officials, the school officials and the District Commissioners. Peace was definitely declared Tuesday when Dr. Ballou and Board of Education members were invited to the Corcoran to view work done for schools.

The superintendent said he would recommend that one of the artists do a portrait of William Howard Taft for display in the new Taft Junior High School.

George M. Whitwell, who made the motion that the buildings and grounds committee be given the task of selecting the pictures, recommended that painting on school walls be prohibited. This appeared to be the opinion of the majority of the board members. Besides selecting pictures, the buildings and grounds committee will decide the schools in which they will be placed.

Scholarships Announced.

Dr. Ballou announced that Benjamin Franklin University has offered two scholarships to graduates of Central and McKinley High Schools, while Assistant Superintendent of Schools Wilkinson announced that 111 scholarships will be given by Howard University to graduates of local colored high schools. Five partial scholarships will be awarded by the Bliss Electrical School.

"I have a very profound feeling about the graduates of our high schools and their inability to enter college or to establish themselves in a remunerative way," Dr. Ballou said. "I feel an increasing responsibility to do everything possible to aid them."

Action was deferred by the board on a request for its approval of a park-shop center at McKinley street and Conecticut avenue northwest, near the E. V. Brown School. Superintendent Ballou recommended that the board be guided by the wishes of the parents.

Dr. Ballou also announced that Assistant Superintendent Robert L. Haycock will be relieved of supervising the school lunch program as soon as Mrs. Katharine MacFarland Ansley, the newly appointed director, inaugurates the new program.

Completion of rooms on the second floor of the Murch School with CWA funds was recommended by the board. These rooms were closed two days during the recent cold wave.

Mrs. Ansley Views Present Meal System

Mrs. Katharine MacFarland Ansley yesterday inspected the system now in use for the preparation and distribution of lunches.

Commissioner George E. Allen was awaiting a decision from Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins on his request for $4,500 to install necessary kitchen equipment in the old Manual Training School at Wisconsin avenue and Q street northwest.

Door-Breaking Gambling Raid Nets Six Men

Garnett to Ask Congress for "Teeth" in D. C. Gaming Law.

Six men were arrested and a number of alleged "racing slips" were confiscated yesterday, when vice squad police raided a room in the rear of a cigar store at 1746 Columbia road northwest.

Walter R. Schmidt, 36, of 1701 Park road northwest, and Louis Newman, 37, of 2501 Fourteenth street northwest, were charged with setting up a gaming table. The others were summoned to appear as Government witnesses.

Lieut. George M. Little, head of the raiding squad, said his men were forced to smash a heavily barred door to gain entrance.

Garnett Wants "Teeth."

Nettled at the collapse of a grand jury investigation into alleged gambling at 1510 H street northwest, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday declared he would seek to have "teeth" put into the District's antigambling laws through Congressional action.

Two suggestions were advanced by him. One was that the widely played "numbers" game should be specifically covered by gaming statutes and the other was that the mere possession of paraphernalia designed to be used in gambling, such as faro tables, roulette wheels and the like, would be sufficient for conviction.

Juries Slow to Convict.

Juries, it was pointed out, have been slow to convict in gaming cases because of the weaknesses of the laws. Mr. Garnett indicated he considered it almost a waste of time to present the average case to a jury now because of the slight chance of obtaining a conviction.

Agitation for strengthening gaming laws has been heard from time to time and has always met stern Congressional disapproval. Mainly, the reasons advanced for refusing to broaden police powers is that such legislation would lessen the protection accorded to "friendly games" in private homes. The aim of the District Attorney is to wipe out commercial gambling.

Shop Foreman Burned By Furnace Flames

Seriously burned when his clothes ignited as he stood before an open furnace door, J. M. Hamilton, 49, foreman of an automobile repair shop at 52 N street northeast, was in Emergency Hospital last night.

Hamilton was burned on the face and body. Fellow workers said he was standing beside the shop furnace warming his hands. Flames leaped out when he opened the door and his oily work clothes ignited. He was given first aid treatment by the fire rescue squad.

"Please try to find Thomas W. Hartley," it said. "His mother dying and calling for him in Lanett, Ala."

Despondent D. C. Resident Kills Self

Note Blames Bad Health; Rifle Used.

Robert A. Hall, 58, of 1928 Bennett place northeast, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself through the head with a rifle in his home.

In a note found by police, Hall explained that his health was poor and he was despondent. His body was found by his son, Woodford R. Hall, and young Hall's wife, who were aroused by the shot. Physicians from Casualty Hospital pronounced Hall dead.

Relatives told police they believed Hall had been disheartened because his son planned to leave for Texas. Coroner A. MacGruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Owner Feels Uncanny As Cash in Can Fades

Richard Asby, restaurant proprietor at 2025 I street northwest, reported his day's receipts stolen. He said the money was in a tin can, secreted in a basement hideaway.

But he couldn't explain how the can, with its contents of $176, was discovered. He said his money is always placed in a can for safekeeping. He was at a loss to know who found the hiding place, and how.

Auto Provides Norfolk Clew In Murder Hunt

Search for a bandit trio in connection with the hold-up and murder of a Colmar Manor (Md.) merchant early Sunday, centered in Norfolk, Va., last night, when police there found an abandoned bullet-riddled automobile with District of Columbia license plates.

On belief that the machine may have been used when three men shot and killed Angus H. Burch, 52-year-old store proprietor, in an attempt to rob his Colmar Manor barbecue stand, local police asked Virginia authorities to search for its occupants.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, said the machine also was believed to have been used in the recent robbery of a bank near Rocky Mount, N. C. Description of the bank robbers, he said, tallied with the men wanted for Burch's murder.

A running gun battle followed the bank "job," Burke said, and the abandoned car was apparently riddled during the fight. Police said license plates on the machine were stolen from Dr. Walter G. Eisinger, of this city.

Burch was killed when he attempted to "fight it out" with the bandits. After fleeing the scene, the trio attacked and beat attendants of two gas stations—one in Washington and another near Hoover Airport in nearby Virginia.

Three persons have been arrested in the case and subsequently released when it was determined they had no connection with the affair.

New Liquor Law Violations Keep District Court Busy

District liquor law violations held the spotlight in Police Court yesterday.

To Henry Leach, 31, went uncertain honors of being the first violator held for grand jury action under the new liquor laws. Charged with possession of nontax-paid liquor, he was arraigned before Judge John P. McMahon, pleaded not guilty and was held under bond of $500.

A few minutes earlier he appeared before Judge Gus A. Schuldt, in District branch of Police Court, and pleaded not guilty to charges of selling liquor without a license and possession of liquor for sale. A jury trial was set for February 21, and bond of $1,000 was fixed.

Leach was arrested Tuesday when vice squad police raided a building at 2416 Fourteenth street northwest. An assortment of aged and bonded liquors was confiscated.

After pleading not guilty to charges of selling liquor without a license, John Waters, colored, 32, became the first man to be tried here under the new laws. Judge Schuldt withheld a verdict until Saturday.

Meanwhile, the new laws were attacked by attorneys for Anthony Dugan, of 3654 New Hampshire avenue northwest, arrested several weeks ago. They claimed the corporation counsel had no power to prosecute, on grounds that the laws were not in effect when Dugan was arrested.

Gas Company Merger Bill To Be Tabled

Valuation Is Held to Be One Reason for Dropping Plan.

The bill authorizing the merger of the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light Cos., which created such a furore last spring, will be tabled at this session upon request of the gas companies, Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, revealed yesterday.

Wilton J. Lambert, counsel for the utility, explained that the measure had been hastily drafted last year and that some of the directors believed that it should be changed in certain particulars, which he did not specify.

He also explained that the emergency which had induced the gas companies to push the bill last session had been removed by the sale of $8,500,000 in bonds last spring.

Would Allow Stock.

The bill, besides authorizing the merger, would have allowed the consolidated company to issue additional stock. Both the company and the Public Utilities Commission contended that the financial condition of the utility was irregular in that it was top heavy with bonds.

The measure was reported favorably with amendments by both the Senate and the House District committees despite considerable controversy as to whether the gas company would be willing to sacrifice going concern value in return for the merger. It was not acted on in either House, however.

Valuation Waiver Sought.

People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech led the fight for inclusion of a provision that the gas company would waive going concern value in future valuations. He was assisted in the Senate by Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, and the late Senator Howell.

One of the major reasons for the desire of the gas company to postpone consideration of the measure, District Building observers believe, is that a hearing at this time might delve into much of the mathematical juggling which the gas company has engaged in during the prolonged valuation hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

Accused Optician Put Under Bond

Waits Hearing on District License Charge.

Charged with practicing as an unlicensed optometrist, John Lester Hough, 34, pleaded not guilty in Police Court yesterday and was ordered held under a $300 bond pending a hearing.

Hough was arrested after he is alleged to have fitted glasses to Detective Sergt. D. H. Jones. He is said to be an employe of the Thompson Optical Co., 723 H street northeast, and was arrested in the company's branch office at 507 Eleventh street northwest.

Dr. Lewis H. Kraskin, chairman of the vigilance committee, Board of Examiners in Optometry, said Hough was not a graduate optometrist and was not licensed to practice.

Dr. Kraskin said a determined drive will be launched to rid Washington of persons violating the District optometry act.

A statement in yesterday's Post, attributed to police, declaring the glasses were found to be unsuited and defective, was denied by police yesterday. It was pointed out that the function of the police does not concern the suitability of optometrical supplies, only the license law enforcement being within their scope.

New Fire Chief Gets Floral Tributes

Deputy Schrom Is Promoted To Fire Chief

The District Commissioners yesterday appointed Deputy Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom as chief engineer to succeed the late George S. Watson, who died Sunday after an illness.

In the appointment of Schrom, the Commissioners ignored a request of the City Fire Fighters Association that Battalion Chief Charles Gill be named to the post. The association had opposed Schrom on the grounds he was a member of the fire trial board, against which an active fight had been conducted because of alleged impositions of unduly severe penalties.

Schrom is a native of York, Pa., and came to Washington in 1890. In 1892 he entered the department as a substitute fireman. He advanced steadily, being elevated to a captaincy in 1904. He was made a battalion chief in 1921, and on July 1, 1931, he was made a deputy chief engineer. During the illness of Chief Watson, he acted as chief engineer.

In 1927, he was appointed to the Policemen's and Firemen's Retiring and Relief Board, and also served on the Fire Trial Board, of which he has been chairman since last August.

The new fire chief said he contemplates no changes in the department, nor does he expect to make any changes in the Fire Trial Board.

Because of his promotion, Chief Schrom is precluded from serving on the trial board. He does not intend to fill the vacancy on the board at this time, he said, because there are sufficient alternate members to carry on its work.

Commission Studies 20 Zoning Petitions

B. Jolliffe, chief engineer of the Federal Radio Commission. A speakers' dinner will precede the affair.

An alleged "ax murderer" was held for grand jury action yesterday, following a coroner's inquest into the death of two women, killed Sunday in a house at 1313 Wylie court northeast.

John Middleton, colored, is the prisoner. Mrs. Clementine Crewe, colored, 29, was killed as she lay in bed, and her mother, Mrs. Lulu Johnson, 60, died in Casualty Hospital. The latter was struck while attempting to aid her daughter.

Advance Payments Now Total $261,375 in Two Days.

Part of the staff of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board will be appointed today, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen announced last night, as the liquor board prepared to advertise the names of 139 firms and individuals whose applications for licenses have been given preliminary approval.

The names will be advertised today and within two weeks, if no protests are registered, licenses will be granted and the licensees may begin the sale of their wares February 22 or 23.

261 Blanks Returned.

More than 2,000 application blanks have been distributed and 261 have been returned. Of this number only 139 were properly filled and the remainder must be resubmitted because of inadequate information in the application forms.

The sum of $261,375 in license fees has been paid into the District coffers since the distribution of applications was begun. Of this sum, $78,825 was deposited yesterday.

The Commissioners have yet to fill positions of secretary, eight inspectors, a number of clerks and three new assistants to the corporation counsel, who will handle liquor prosecutions.

Walt Mason, Himself

Root of Evil.

Before our culture reached those lands inhabited by heathen bands, the curse of money was unknown; men talked not of the buck or bone, or of the smacker or the plunk, or other monetary junk. The natives didn't spend their time intriguing for another dime. They traded shells or things like those for simple gawds and furbelows. The root of evil wasn't there to stir up envy and despair, to lead men on to graft and guile, in order to increase their pile. They should have been a happy bunch, life should have had a pleasant punch. We have been taught that money leads to vicious thoughts and evil deeds; it is the monumental curse that makes the world grow worse and worse; without it there would be relief for nearly all our present grief. But when we read up heathen lore we find it sprinkled well with gore. The natives of those happy lands where no financial mogul stands, which are devoid of money kings, would scrap around for other things. They always found some good excuse for turning all the war dogs loose, and with spiked clubs and homemade bows they wrought much havoc with their foes. Although they'd never seen a dime, they seemed to wade knee-deep in crime, thir lack of money placed no ban on all the passions known to man. The root of evil cast its blight before a shekel was in sight.

Cavalier Zone Defense Falters and Middies Run Up Margin.

Borries, Dornin Again Tar Stars; Visitors Led by Strum.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Basketers of University of Virginia showed flashes of good work, but could not cope with the all-around play of the Annapolis Midshipmen, and went down to defeat on the court today. The score was, Navy, 34; Virginia, 20.

The Cavaliers, plainly showing the effects of their bristling battle with University of Maryland last night, injected two complete sets of players into the game in a fruitless effort to check the Tars. The naval lads took command at the outset and held command all the way. At the end of a listless first half Navy was in the van, 14 to 7.

Strum, Virginia's star forward, started a rally soon after the second half got under way, and accounted for three field goals in a row. These, with a field goal by Rogers and a foul throw by Marrett enabled Virginia to draw within 2 points of tying the count. Meanwhile Dornin and Mandelkorn each netted a double decker for Navy, and at the end of 5 minutes of play the home team was leading at 18 to 16.

Navy Draws Away.

Up to this point the defense of the Cavaliers proved very effective, but the pace was having its effect and from then on, Navy, speeding its attack, steadily drew away again. With the game safely in hand, substitutes played the last six minutes for the home team.

Buzz Borries and Dusty Dornin again led the attack for the Tars. The former playing only two-thirds of the game, accounted for 3 field goals and 6 shots from the penalty strip, for 12 points, while Dornin, who went the full route, netted 6 double deckers and 1 from the mark for a tally of 13. Strum was in the high spot for Virginia with 3 field goals and 1 charity toss for 11 points.

Silver Spring Defeats Washington-Lee, 25-18

Led by Capt. Radolph Clark, who scored 14 points in the last half, the Silver Spring High quintet won their first game of the year, trouncing the Washington and Lee dribblers, 25-18, on the Little Generals' court.

The visitors led, 6-0, at the quarter, but a rally, led by Cooper, of the Virginians, put the latter ahead, 11-9, at half time. In the third quarter Silver Spring outscored their opponents, 10 to 1, and played them to a standstill in the last period to cop the verdict.

Robertson and Vandervoort kept the Takoils in the running in the first half, and Clark came through with sensational play in the last two periods to enable them to win their first contest in 14 starts. Cooper, with 4 field goals, was outstanding for the losers.

Mancuso in Hospital; Likely to Report Late

Houston, Tex., Feb. 7 (AP).—The illness of Gus Mancuso, catcher for the world champion New York Giants, was diagnosed today as "a mild form of typhoid" and he was removed from his home to a hospital. Physicians expressed belief he would be able to report for spring training "although probably a bit late."

Babe Ruth 40 Glad He Is Not 140

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (AP).—The great man of baseball, George Herman Ruth, passed his fortieth milestone today as magnificently as he has done all else in his fantastic career—host to a huge army of guests even though they were only influenza germs.

With a cough and a wheeze and a low monotone of groans, the Babe languished weakly but brilliantly in a robe of scarlet and saffron, received stacks of telegrams and letters, had his picture taken countless times, and met the press—all the time expanding upon the symptoms and diseases that inhabited his hugh frame.

To Leave for Florida.

He leaves tomorrow morning for St. Petersburg, Fla., to rest before starting training for what probably is his final years as a regular outfielder with the Yankees. He lost 16 pounds in a 10-day tussle with the flu, and though he has most of it back, he looks pale and all washed out.

"I'm getting old, kid, getting old," he said, and for the first time it seemed as if he really meant it.

"For three days," he explained, "I had a temperature of 104½ degrees. I am unconscious for two days; 20 hours, anyway."

The Babe always has been an nuctious invalid, enjoying his symptoms to the utmost, but this one got out of hand. He had to forego any celebration of an event he has dreaded, even if he wanted to, but he was healthy enough to receive presents.

Proud of Golf Bag.

He was particularly proud of a mammoth golf bag that looked like a Rube Goldberg creation. It was a present from Mrs. Ruth and his two daughters, Julia, 18, and Dorothy, 12.

"Haw, haw," said the Babe, "look at it. It carries everything but a motorcycle and a soup kitchen."

Baseball is far from his mind at the moment. He was more interested in whether he could get enough nonstriking taxicabs to lug all his duffle to the train tomorrow. But he had read about his boss, Col. Jacob Ruppert, bemoaning the fact that the Yanks weren't invited to bid on the Athletics' Lefty Grove. Ruppert, who is paying the Babe $35,000 this year, said he would have given $150,000 for Grove.

Says "We'd Drift In."

"A pitcher like that,' 'said the Babe, "sure would have made plenty of difference to us. He's worth $150,000 in cash all right. We'd drift in this year with him.

"But don't think that Grove ever bothered us much. In 1928 when he lost only eight games we beat him six times. You hit that smoke ball of his and it goes, like it was anybodyelse's."

The Babe got no birthday greeting from Ruppert, but there was a telegram of congratulations from Ed Barrow, business manager of the Yanks, Ruth's sparring partner at odd times through the years since Ed first managed the bam when they were both with the Red Sox.

"Huh," he said, frowning. "That would make me 140 years old. What would I do with myself?"

The Navy's Fighting Men Who Risk Clean Record Against University of Virginia

Charlottesville, Va., is anticipating with relish the head-on crash of the Annapolis and Virginia boxing teams Saturday night, when the unbeaten records of both the Cavaliers and Midshipmen will be at stake. Virginia, last year, inflicted the first boxing defeat ever suffered by the Middies at Annapolis.

Virginia Ringmen Face Test Against Navy Saturday Night

Sell-out Seen for Bouts at Charlottesville; Cavaliers Conference Leaders Three Years; Foe Has Lost Only 3 Meets in 14 Seasons.

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA'S boxing team will face the acid test of its 1934 campaign Saturday night in Memorial gymnasium here when the Cavalier fighters defend a 16-match winning streak against the formidable scrappers from the Naval Academy.

If Virginia hopes to win its boxers will be forced to be in their best physical condition and unravel their finest fighting of the year, since the Midshipmen will invade the Cavalier ring sporting one of their best teams in history.

Southern Conference champions for the last three years and undefeated since it dropped a thrillingly close 4-3 decision to Duke back in 1931 Virginia is pinning its hopes for victory on eight stalwarts—Archie Hahn, jr., bantamweight, son of the Virginia track coach; Gordon Rainey, featherweight; Lewis Bosher, lightweight; Maynard Womer, welterweight; John Lucas, junior middleweight; Capt. Harold Stuart, middleweight; Lyndon Lee, light heavyweight, and Gene Hourihan, heavyweight.

Victors Over Harvard.

These are the scrappers who hoisted the Cavaliers to a 6-2 victory over Harvard in the opening meet of the year; a 5-3 win over V. M. I., a 6-2 triumph over North Carolina, and a 5-3 victory over Virginia Tech last week. During the last 13 years Virginia has won 47, lost 18 and tied 2 meets.

Navy's record is perhaps more pretentious than that of Virginia. The Middies have dropped but three meets in the last 14 seasons, and, incidentally, it was Virginia who handed Navy its first setback at Annapolis last February. Navy was beaten, 5-3, in one of the season's big surprises.

Conqueror of Western Maryland, Navy last week handed North Carolina a 6-2 lacing—the same score Virginia beat the Tarheels.

When Spike Webb sends his gladiators into action against Johnny La Rowe's boxers, Capt. McNaughton, 155-pounder, will not be in the Middies' line-up. Coach Webb stated last night that either Davey Davenport or "Bev" Harold, both North Carolina boys, would take his place. Both have been more impressive than McNaughton, according to Webb, and it is likely that Davenport, a third-classman, who won four straight fights by knockouts as a plebe boxer, will get the call. Webb denied reports that McNaughton's eyes were giving him trouble.

Cites His Victory.

Webb looks to Chet Smith to win his bout in the bantamweight class, and points to Smith's great three-round victory over Bennett, of Western Maryland. Eddie Mulquin will be the featherweight entry, and Bob Hopkins, a genuine two-fisted fighter, will face the Virginia lightweight.

One of the best punchers on the Navy squad is Ken Nauman, welterweight with 145 pounds of fighting fury and dynamite, who hails from Kansas City. Davenport is the junior middleweight entry, and Martin Peppard will compete in the middleweight class.

The two star tackles of the football team, George Lambert and 215-pound Slate Cutter, will oppose the Virginia light-heavyweight and the heavyweight boxers, respectively. Cutter packs a tremendous wallop, according to Webb, and needs only a good opening to send his man to dreamland, Webb stated.

Navy's team will leave early Saturday for the Cavalier stronghold. Meanwhile, Virginia is preparing for its largest boxing crowd in history. Officials predict a sell-out, since the Navy match is considered by far the most important on the Cavalier schedule in years.

Clifton Forge Bows.

Clifton Forge, Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—A final-quarter rally by the high school basket ball team fell short and the Charlottesville Five, of the Charlottesville School for Boys, won here, 26 to 23. Payne, of Charlottesville, with 9 points, and Scruggs, of Clifton Forge, with 7, were high scorers.

New Turf Body In New York Looming

Bill Being Drawn to Set Up Commission Having Wide Powers.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 7 (AP).—New York State's stricken racing industry may soon be governed by a State commission similar to those in existence in many other States.

This became known today when it was learned that a bill is being drafted for submission to the Legislature proposing to supplant the powers of the Jockey Club which has supervised the sport for nearly half a century, with a controlling body similar to the State thletic commission which governs boxing and wrestling.

This will be introduced, it was learned, by Senator John J. Dunnigan, Democratic leader in the upper house, within a week or two.

While refusing to divulge details, Senator Dunnigan said:

"All I can say now is that we are awaiting the annual report of the present racing commission, which must be submitted to the Legislature before February 15, before making any move."

Political observers were of the opinion that the measure would call for abolishment of the present body of three members, powers of which are limited and exercised only little, and create an entirely new setup.

All Suffer Losses.

Duties of the present commission have been confined chiefly to issuing licenses to associations conducting the sport, it was pointed out, leaving the actual supervision of regulations under which races are run, including dates of the various meetings and licensing of owners, trainers and the like to the Jockey Club.

All the racing plants have suffered losses in recent years, with the result that one or two have intimated that without immediate relief they may be forced to close. Stakes have been abandoned and purses slashed within the past year.

The only means of relief, racing men say, is to be found in legalization of betting, now conducted under the 'oral" system over which the racing associations have no control.

To this end two bills have already been introduced in the legislature.

Meet Mr. Crosley

By Jack Miley (Pinch-Hitting for Gallico).

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (Spl.).—If Henry Ford had bought the Tigers, the denizens of Detroit wouldn't have been any more flabbergasted than were the citizens of Cincinnati when they heard that Powel Crosley, jr., the big aerial and antennae man, had purchased the Reds a few days ago.

For Comrade Crosley is one of those curious caballeros who started out in life with a screw-driver in his pocket and parlayed this carpenterial gadget into a fortune. For an outlay of about 50 cents, net, he pushed himself into the big income tax brackets a dozen or so years ago.

The son of a Cincinnati lawyer, Crosley took a brief bust at the bar; found his townsmen too law abiding for profit and then tried to sell bonds. But the burghers didn't want any of those, either, and it began to look tough for him, when along came his little boy's birthday.

Mrs. Crosley thought junior would like a radio set. Crosley went downtown to buy one of those new-fangled contraptions. The man wanted too much money. So Crosley took the four bits or so he'd saved from his punch allowance, went to a hardware store and got himself a handful of nuts and bolts, a coil of wire and some other odd gimmicks.

He went home and built a set. It worked. A neighbor heard it. He made another. Then the big idea smacked him right between the glimmers. Hocking his life insurance and scraping up a few more bucks from other sources, he went into the radio business. He built 'em cheap and good and cleaned up.

Like many another guy who gets in the important dough speedily, Crosley hired a publicist, one Bob Stayman, to see that he got due credit for his achievements. One day he asked his drum-beater:

"Bob, why don't people like me?"

"Because you're pushing your pan into the papers too much," the truthful p. a. retorted, and Crosley gave him a month's pay and fired him.

The Central Trust Co. of Cincinnati has owned the Reds since Sidney Weil pawned them when the stock market crashed. Now a cellar league ball club is a poor investment for a money mausoleum. You can't clip coupons from a second baseman who doesn't hit the size of his hat. And suppose the bank examiners walk in and find a horse hide belter trying to get an advance for a beef stew from the cashier? The Reds weren't really frozen assets on the bank's books—they were just sort of numb. And the financiers were glad to unload them to Crosley.

As a radio magnate—Crosley also owns a broadcasting station out on the banks of the beautiful Oh-io—the new possessor of the Reds has great possibilities. He could wire those gazelles for sound. By equipping each man with a short wave set, Owner Crosley could sit with a bag of peanuts on his lap in his box at Redland Field and give the diamond dusters some expert advice while they're doing their chores.

Then again, he might find an Eddie Cantor in the outfield. Some of those Reds last season were pretty funny guys—but they weren't billing themselves as comedians.

On the other hand, if a pinch-hitter doesn't deliver, Owner Crosley could make hi mone of those early bird gymnastic announcers at his radio station. Or if Dazzy Vance, whom he purchased Tuesday, drops a few to the Phillies or the Dodgers, he could put him on the air with some cake baking recipes. Why, Crosley has limitless opportunities to chastise his athletes if they don't come up to par.

Then, too, there is an aviation angle to the Reds this year. Crosley is a nut on cloud-jumping. In fact, he is experimenting with some sort of mail-order plane, to be delivered to your home for eight or nine bucks, C. O. D.

He is going to fly his apple-knockers around the National League circuit, he says. All players, it is presumed, will wear parachutes. Perhaps, when they are flying over Pittsburgh, Crosley may nudge an athlete, point to the window and tell him:

Or Dazzler Vance may approach Crosley in Boston with the plea:

Nats to Open With Boston April 16

Play Is New York Two Sundays for First Time in History.

WASHINGTON was dealt with generously in the allotment of choice baseball dates, it is revealed today with the announcement of the official American League schedule for 1934—the old infallible harbinger of spring.

In addition to confirming the already well-founded report that the Nats would have as their inaugural-game guests the revitalized Red Sox, the schedule reveals a grist of holiday plums for the Washington club both at home and abroad.

Washington will be the baseball capital of the Nation for a day at least on April 16 when the Nats and Red Sox launch the American League season at Griffith Stadium one day before the remainder of the league swings into action.

Gets Jump on Rest.

The league heads, with an eye to mantling what they are pleased to call the national pastime with the cloak of national approval, again have voted to start the season in Washington one day ahead of the regular opening in other cities. The regular schedule called for Washington to open the campaign in Boston on April 17, but the revised schedule assures the presence of President Roosevelt and his official family at the game that signals the start of the pennant race.

Deprived of a few Sunday dates at home by the legalization of Sunday baseball in Pennsylvania, the Nats find the new schedule reacting to their financial benefit in their assignment of two Sunday dates at New York against the Yankees.

Twice in New York.

Twice during the season—in early May and late August—the Nats are the beneficiaries of Saturday and Sunday dates in Manhattan, breaking precedent which has never seen a Washington team perform on Sunday before habitually large New York crowds.

Like each other club in the league, Washington is allotted 12 Saturdays and Sundays at home, but the Nats get a break in their two holiday dates abroad. The Washington team will cut in on April 19—Patriots' Day—at Boston, which is the only city in the league that sets the date aside as a holiday. And with the Boston Club promising miraculous things for 1934, the team that opposes the Red Sox on Patriots' Day next season shares in the velvet.

Decoration Day Bill.

The annual Decoration Day double-header will find the Nats playing at New York on a day that ranks with July 4 as the choicest date on the schedule. A Decoration Day crowd in New York will be vastly more profitable for the Nats than a capacity crowd in Washington.

Washington's holiday dates at home will find Philadelphia invading Griffith Stadium on July 4 and Boston here on Labor Day.

Following their one-day stand with Boston here on April 16, the Nats repair to the Hub for three days, thence to Philadelphia for three days and come back to Washington for a three-game series with the Red Sox. They first meet the Yankees on April 30 at Griffith Stadium.

Brunswick High Takes Court Double-Header

Brunswick, Md., Feb. 7 (Spl.).—Brunswick High School downed Smithsburg County High in a twin bill on the home court, the boys winning, 25 to 14, and the girls, 18 to 17. The boys took the lead in the first period and with the game well in hand Coach Smith sent in his second string in the fourth round.

The girls' game was fast and close.

$8.70 Victor Overtakes Croon

Chain Takes First Race; Drombo Wins Third to Pay $8.40.

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 7 (AP).—Raymond "Sonny" Workman, crack rider for the C. V. Whitney establishment who arrived late in Florida this winter and then accepted comparatively few mounts, rode in his old time style here this afternoon. After winning the juvenile event for Mr. Whitney, the Washington boy gave J. Kelly's General A a rousing ride to win the featured Naples purse by a nose. Mrs. K. Jesberger's very consistent filly, Croon, lost the purse in the last nod, while saving the place by a half length from the Shandon Farm's Minton. General A ran the six furlongs in 1:11 2-5 and paid $8.70.

The husky Workman made General A reveal much superior form to that displayed in the veteran's last outing. The General was reserved behind the pace, while Croon and Ladogan vied for the early lead. Coucci eased back around the final bend, which enabled Ladogan, the favorite, to move into a daylight advantage. The Bronx Express then swung Croon around the leader to take command after entering the stretch. Meanwhile, Workman was callnig on General A and this fellow responded gamely. Ladogan finished last.

Chain Is Victorious.

Chain, well handled by Hunter, was a driving winner of the 6-furlong opener, beating Bright Bubble by a half length. All Rowes was a poor third. Crazy Jane, the hot choice, flattered her backers for a half mile, then curled up fast. Chain, rated close up, stuck her head in front of Bright Bubble straightening out in the stretch and gamely held to a narrow advantage to return $9.80.

As on the previous Wednesday and on each succeeding one, the second event, styled "the helpful," was run in the name of charity, with the net mutuel proceeds going to Hialeah and vicinity. Sonny Workman drove Love Sick to a half-length score over the 3-furlong "baby race" course. Idle Victory, the heavy favorite, offered most contention all the way, but the winner had too much speed and courage. Neon was third, a length behind. Love Sick paid $8.50.

Charity Nets $1,463.

Charity benefited to the extent of $1,463, practically double the proceeds netted a week ago.

Another favorite fell by the wayside when Butter Beans took a sound licking from Drombo in the third. The latter, well backed himself, registered by 4 lengths to pay $8.40. Meloy finished 5 spans behind Butter Beans. Apprentice O. Harbort rode faultlessly astride Drombo.

The talent was pretty well divided between Clonard and Dark Conquest in the fourth, a maiden race. Clonard, with two local races under his belt, finally was installed an even money choice and beat his rival by two lengths. Dark Conquest, a 4-year-old which used to run with the best, had not appeared under silks since June, but he managed to finish second after breaking slowly and taking the overland route. A full 10 lengths back came Pass for third money.

The first disqualification of the Florida season occurred in the last race. Fleet Flag finished first by a half length, but his number was taken down. This made Prince Tokalon the winner, with Spud second and Marcasite third. Prince Tokalon carried Fleet Flag wide turning into the stretch, then the latter swerved in and bothered Prince Tokalon. The winner paid $5.60.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The First Division of the American Expeditionary Forces chalked up almost every "first" possible during the World War, except in the matter of getting home. They were the first to leave this country, first to arrive in France, first to serve in the trenches, and first to fight.

To the First Division goes also the honor of having been first to fire a hostile shell, first to inflict a casualty, first to receive a wound, first to lose a man, first to capture a prisoner, first to repel a German raid, first to man an independent sector, and the first and only division to be mentioned exclusively in general orders. This order, which is the pride of the division, was issued November 19, 1918. It said: "The Commander-in-Chief has noted in this division a special pride of service and a high state of morale never broken by hardship nor battle."

The division's first regiments landed at St. Nazarre in June, 1917. It fired its first shell on October 23, and two days later the first American officer was wounded. Two days after that it took its first prisoner, and on the night of November 2, it suffered its first loss when the first American soldiers — Corpl. James B. Gresham and Privates Thomas S. Enright and Merle D. Hay—were killed in a raid by the Germans.

In January of the next year the division had removed to the Toul sector, where its soldiers were first to take charge of a section of trenches. The first offensive attack of an American unit was the attack on Cantigny.

Yet strangs as it seems, with all its firsts, the First Division had one "last." It was the last division home after the war.

Dear Al:

For a few minutes, as the sun was casting shadows on the lake over in the infield, I had a winner today. In fact, I was blessing the luck that caused the racing secretary to give us eight races instead of the usual seven. But, what to my wondering eyes did appear but Santa Claus and eight tiny reindeers—at least that's what it looked like to backers of Prince Tokalon. They took down my Fleet Flag's nice, clean number 4 and put up Prince Tokalon's unfashionable number 6. Both horses did a lot of bumping and the judges decided that Young Hunter and Fleet Flag were to blame. The boy got 20 days and the horse got a bag of oats. It was a tough day, fellow. Especially when Sonny Workman awoke from a sound sleep to beat me out of two purses.

BILL.

First race—Claremont shapes up well here and gets only a steadying impost, thanks to the apprentice allowance. Looks as if he will have Style Corner to beat. Blackmock has been far too consistent to overlook entirely.

Second race—Angelic showed a neat turn of hoof in that debut and needs only a hustling ride to take care of these youngsters. Blue Cat ran a promising race and should improve. Below Zero for the show end.

Third race—Bickering threw me down with a bang last out but the company was superior to this. Seems ideally suited in my book and gets the call. Escadron and Taunton, the latter dangerous as ever, to complete the money picture.

Fifth race—Quel Jeu mixes fast trials with promising races and has reached winning form, I believe. Can't loaf any in this field, however. Clotho demonstrated his speed last out despite the pay-off. The Pelican for the minor award.

Sixth race—Aunt Flor is an improved miss and ready to defeat such as Well Built and Bartering Kate. The top one had none the best of racing luck in that previous effort.

Seventh race—I have had a lot of trouble in final races since arriving at this course. For tomorrow, I'm after a good price on the fast-working Cannon Law. Resisting and Raccoon for the other places.

Stocks Droop In Selling of Profit-Takers

...sses Average 2.9 on Heavy Dealing Total of 4,522,550 Shares.

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Most speculative markets retreated before waves of profit-taking today, stocks losing roughly 1 to 4 points.

For shares the average net loss of nearly 3 points was the largest since October 30. Strong spots persisted, chiefly among metal issues and senior equities, and late short covering generally reduced losses, but net changes heavily favored declines. Sales totaled 4,522,550 shares.

French Events Watched.

Wall street naturally followed closely developments in France, though the concensus was that those events exerted little effect on the stock exchange.

Outlines of the proposed regulatory legislation possibly brought some contraction of speculative operations, and there was doubtless an increased volume of short selling. The market sagged in the morning, hardened for a while after noon, ran into further selling and finally firmed a bit. Utilities, rails and the general industrial section were about equally upset. Aircrafts weakened, presumably in reflection of the Congressional inquiry.

French francs maintained a firm position in relation to dollars most of the day. Banking circles here and abroad heard that America's equalization fund was being used to keep dollars down and francs higher; it was also suggested that the French unit benefited from short covering.

News Is Favorable.

Business news was favorable, even though markets seemed not in a mood to notice it.

Steel operations, Iron Age said, have increased to 38 per cent of capacity from 35 per cent last week, reflecting "mounting demands from the automobile industry and the railroads," which give the steelmaking business "a buoyancy that it has not possessed since last summer."

Freight car loadings last week were on the whole a bit higher, according to reports thus far at hand, and electric power production increased substantially over both a year ago and the previous week.

American Woolen Co.'s 1933 earnings statement, accompanied by the first dividend on the preferred stock since 1927, represented a striking recovery, though the president pointed out that last year had "unusual features" and that the profit of around $7,000,000 "should not be regarded as a measure of what may be expected for the future."

Woolen Preferred.

Woolen preferred touched its best price in several years, then dropped back, possibly because a larger distribution than $1.25 had been expected.

United Aircraft was off about 4 points at the lowest, and both Case and Union Pacific finished 4 lower. United States Steel, American Telephone, New York Central, Consolidated Gas, Sears Roebuck, and North American lost around 2 net.

Metals apparently harkened to Washington reports, originating in pro-silver quarters, that further steps were to be taken to increase the price of silver. United States Smelting had strong sponsorship, closing approximately 5 points higher.

Commodity Trading Particulars Are Sought

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Members of the New York Commodity Exchange, Inc., have been asked to report to its business conduct committee all transactions consummated in the month of October.

While no explanation was offered, Wall Street recalled that silver rose promptly in active trading during that month, and that other commodities advanced in response to President Roosevelt's gold price-fixing plan announced on October 22.

Rail Loadings Improve.

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Half a dozen railroads reported their carloadings for last week were considerably improved over the corresponding period in 1933.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—The stock exchange closed with a better tone after a moderately active session today. French bonds and equities recovered some earlier losses on signs of action of the cabinet and hopes for the formation of a national government. Transatlantic issues eased after early firmness, while home rails and industrials were resupported. The market closed steady.

Paris—Rentes lost most of yesterday's gains, but stiffened later when the cabinet's resignation was rumored. International issues were firmer, while domestic stocks reflected the country's uneasiness. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—After a firmer opening, prices on the bourse last most of their gains on selling orders. The market closed unsettled and weaker.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Evidence Now Indicates We Are Headed Into Another Speculative Period; Rise in Past Six Weeks Has Been Close to 25 Per Cent.

By Ralph West Robey.

There must be little question remaining in any one's mind after what has happened in the last few days as to whether we again are on a speculative rampage in this country. Not only has the market been advancing at a marked rate, but the volume of trading has been extremely heavy. The bond market, too, has been setting new records in volume, and prices have been written up at an astonishing rate. According to gossip in Wall street, the public again is coming into securities in increasing volume and with few questions, although as yet, it is said, the volume of trading on margin accounts remains comparatively small.

Taken all in all, the record of the stock market for the past year and a half is an exceedingly interesting and valuable commentary on the violent disturbances to which our economic system has been subjected. As measured by the index of stock prices of the Standard Statistics Co., the low of the stock market was on July 8, 1932. At that time the index stood at 35. The volume of trading was running well below 1,000,000 shares a day.

Immediately thereafter a rally of immense proportions was started in the market. This was partly because the foreign withdrawals of gold had been brought to an end and, even more largely, because there were beginning to be unmistakable signs of business improvement. The result was that by the end of July the index of stock prices had increased to 48 and trading was running between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 shares a day.

During August the climb continued so that by the end of the month the index stood at 67. The volume of trading increased to 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 shares a day. On the seventh of September the index reached its peak of 74, an increase of 111 per cent in two months.

Gradual Recession in Both Prices and Volume Started.

From this point there was a gradual recession both in prices and volume of trading. By the end of September the index had fallen to 64 and trading was again averaging below 1,500,000 shares a day. During October the same trend was continued, although the drop was more rapid. Toward the end of this month trading again fell to substantially below a million shares.

In November there was a midmonth rally, but it was unable to hold, with the result that the month ended with the stock index at 52 and the volume of trading still running below a million shares. The same general trend continued through December, January and February, a new low being reached on February 27 with the index at 44.

With the opening of the stock market on March 15, after the banking holiday, stock prices started off at 54. The following day they moved up 1 point to 55 and thereafter sank again until the end of the month, when the index was 46 and the volume of trading was below 750,000 shares a day.

At this point the great inflationary boom started. We already, of course, had suspended the gold standard in effect, and now there began to be talk of all kinds of inflationary panaceas. Further, we were beginning to see signs of an immense increase in business activity. The result was that another extremely rapid run-up in stock prices occurred, the index being carried from the 46 of March 31 to 66 on April 29, to 77 on May 31, to 85 on June 30 and to 97 on July 18. This last date was the peak of this movement. Curiously enough, too, it also marked an increase of 111 per cent over the point from which it started.

Following This Was a Rapid Recession.

Following this date, July 18, 1933, there was an extremely rapid recession, the index falling from 97 to 77 within four days. Thereafter there was a rally and by the end of August the index was back to 89. It stayed high in the eighties until the latter part of September and then started to slip until by October 31 it was down to 71. During November there was some pick-up, the index advancing to 81. In December the prices stayed fairly steady, easing off to 76 on December 21.

From this point there was a gradual recovery to 80 by the end of the month and to 89 by January 31. There also was a marked increase in the volume of trading. During the latter part of December and the first part of January trading was around 1,000,000 shares a day. More recently it has been ranging between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 shares and on a few days in excess of 4,000,000.

That is the record to date. On a percentage basis the increase in the current movement has been only about 25 per cent. If the opinion of Wall street counts for anything, however, we merely are getting started. I think I never have seen more unanimous opinion than one finds in the Street now to the effect that we are "off for the races."

Bonds Back Up Under Fire of Profit-Takers

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Bonds backed up again today under a steady fire from the profit takers and casualties of 1 to 3 or more points predominated.

While the average for 60 domestic corporate issues dropped nine-tenths of a point—its largest decline for a single session since September 21 last—the trading volume dwindled sharply.

Transfers totaled $20,988,000, par value, against $26,123,000 yesterday.

Top-heavinesss Blamed.

Most dealers were in agreement with stock market analysts in concluding that the reaction was largely the result of a topheavy condition the same as inequities.

Political disturbances at Paris, it was said, probably had little to do with the reversal. The American economic picture continued bright, with electric power output showing a substantial jump and steel production, as estimated by Iron Age, at its best levels since last summer.

The recently more buoyant rails bore the brunt of the day's realizing. Among the more active losers here were liens of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, Chicago Great Western, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Erie, Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Frisco, Southern, Wabash and Western Pacific.

On Weakening List.

Although a few of the utilities and industrials resisted, there was pronounced heaviness displayed by bonds of American & Foreign Power, American Rolling Mill, Columbia Gas, Goodrich, International Hydro-Electric, International Telephone, Morris & Co., North American Edison, Otis Steel, Philadelphia, Reading Coal & Iron, Portland General Electric, United Drug, U. S. Rubber, Utilities Power & Light, and Warner Bros.

With the exception of Liberty first 4¼s, which held a gain of three thirty-seconds of a point, the U. S. Government list was off one thirty-second to nine thirty-seconds. Trading here was about as quiet as that of yesterday.

Foreign obligations were irregular. French Government 7½s were off nearly 6 points at one time, but they secured late support and ended with a net decline of only 1¾, while the 7s were unchanged. Bonds of Brazil, Panama, Rhine-Westphalia, Rio Grande do Sul, Great Britain, Switzerland and Vienna improved fractionally to more than 2 points, but issues of Argentina, Copenhagen, Denmark, Germany and Italy lost as much.

Early Cotton Rise Is Cut in Late Trading

May Closes at 12.03 as General Market Rises 5 to 12 Points.

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—An advance of approximately $1 a bale in cotton early today was followed by sharp reactions. May contracts after touching 12.17 broke to 11.87 but then rallied on a renewal of trade buying and covering, closing at 12.03. The general market closed firm at net advances of 5 to 12 points.

The opening was 13 to 20 points higher on overnight buying orders and renewed buying for both domestic and foreign trade account which was stimulated by relatively firm Liverpool cables. March sold up to 11.99 and October to 12.52, with active months showing net advances of some 16 to 20 points, but heavy realizing was encountered at these figures. There also appeared to be scattered selling accompanied by talk of an easier technical position and of possible increase in Southern spot offerings above the 12-cent level for May contracts.

This was sufficient to supply the initial demand, and prices worked slowly off during the morning, with sellers later becoming more active following weakness in the grain and stock markets. Stop orders were uncovered on the break which sent the market down to 11.72 for March and 12.23 for October, or about 24 to 31 points below the forenoon highs. After their execution pressure subsided and prices stiffened in the late trading on covering combined with continued trade and commission house buying. Closing quotations showed rallies of 16 to 18 points from the lowest.

Southern selling was more in evidence at times, according to some observers, but no material change was reported in the spot situation. International houses reported some buying here for French account on wider differences between the New York and Havre markets during the early trading. Exports today, 17,323, making 5,128,692 so far this season. Port receipts, 6,848. United States port stocks, 3,707,568.

Latin-America Credit Status Is Improving

New York, Feb. 7.—Latin-American credit conditions show a distinct improvement and collection conditions reflect encouraging gains in the quarterly survey by the Foreign Credit Interchange Bureau of the National Association of Credit Men. The survey is based on reports from the member firms of the bureau which are engaged in trade with those countries.

A sharp contrast is seen in this survey as compared with the survey covering corresponding period of the closing months of 1932, W. S. Swingle, head of the association's foreign department, declared.

"In the credit survey for 1932," Mr. Swingle pointed out, "the trend was definitely downward with only three countries showing a slight improvement. In the current survey the trend during the last quarter of the year is revealed as definitely upward. Fifteen countries show an improvement in the fourth quarter of last year and declines are indicated in only four of the 21 markets covered.

"A year ago the credit index showed 16 countries in the classification of 'very poor.' The credit conditions for these countries have now improved sufficiently to show a gain of 20 points in the index. Even the countries lowest in the previous year's index showed a material gain last year."

Germany Studies Prevention of Ice

A new medium for preventing ice forming on automotive highways is being tried out in Germany, according to a report from the American consulate-general, Berlin, made public by the Commerce Department.

It is understood that the process involves the addition of cattle salt to the surface of a highway. Experiments conducted on tar highways in Hessen showed that the layer of ice formed during frosty weather was loose and could be readily removed.

The salt is added to the highway during construction, being sprayed on the surface before the second coat of tar is added. About 700 grams of salt are used per square meter of the highway surface. It is covered with hot tar and rolled in with crushed stones.

Detroit Business Improves.

Detroit, Feb. 7 (AP).—A survey by the Detroit Chamber of Commerce today reported two men at work in factories of the city for every one man employed ten months ago. The survey declared mounting automobile orders, increasing bank deposits and better retail sales accompanied the reemployment.

Record Output Of Rose Oil Set In Bulgaria

Production of rose oil in Bulgaria during 1933 was the highest on record, according to a report from Consul John McArdle, Sofia, made public by the Commerce Department. The total output amounted to 3,450 kilograms, compared with 1,891 kilograms in 1932.

The Agricultural Bank of Bulgaria has a virtual monopoly on the country's rose oil industry and finances to a large extent all operations in connection with production. After distillation the bulk of the oil is stored in the vaults of the bank.

It is estimated that the Agricultural Bank now holds about 3,000 kilograms of rose oil, chiefly from the 1933 campaign, which is claimed to be the purest rose oil ever produced in Bulgaria.

Total exports of rose oil during 1933 were approximately 1,480 kilograms, valued at 58,600,000 leva, compared with 919 kilos valued at 37,970,000 leva exported in 1932.

A large part of the rose oil exports from Bulgaria formerly consisted of privately owned merchandise, subject to possible adulteration and often the product of rather crude distillation by the peasants. At present, however, a considerable portion of the oil exported comes from the stocks of the Agricultural Bank of Bulgaria, purchased by local exporters for their clients abroad. According to information from the bank, in all such cases, the shipment is sent directly by the bank itself to the clients abroad, with the bank's seal on the containers as a guarantee of the purity and quality of the product.

The bank is making every effort to maintain the purity of the product and fears that if the sale is made directly to the local merchant it may be resold in an adulterated condition.

Electric Power Output Rises In Past Week

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Electric power output last week increased substantially over the previous week and widened the rate of gain over the corresponding week last year to 12.5 per cent, the largest percentage increase in several months.

The rise in outturn over the preceding week, amounting to about 26,000,000 kilowatt hours, was the largest reported for a comparable period since the official figures have been compiled. In the last four years the trend was down during this period.

While utility interests attributed the gain partly to the severe weather over a large part of the country, it was also considered probable that increased industrial operations had been an influence.

The 12.5 per cent improvement over 1933 topped all previous gains since the week of September 16 last year. In the previous week the reported rise was 9.6 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

Output for the week, as reported by the Edison Electric Institute, amounted to 1,636,275,000 kilowatt hours against 1,610,542,000 in the previous week and 1,454,913,000 in the like 1933 period.

In the New England district the increase over last year was 11.8 per cent against 8.6 per cent in the previous week. Middle Atlantic, up 12.3 against 9.9; Central Industrial, up 16.6 against 13.1; West Central, up 6.2 against 5.2; Southern States, up 10.8 against 7.9; Rocky Mountain, up 17.6 against 17.5; Pacific Coast, up 8.6 against 2.8.

Prisoner Flees Third Time, Takes 5 Others

Jackson, Ky., Feb. 7 (AP).—Matt Vancleve escaped from Breathitt County Jail here today for the third time, taking five others with him.

The men sawed their way out of a cell. Three of them were recaptured, but not Vancleve, who was held on a shooting charge.

British Fruit Imports Climb To High Levels

Shipments Are Largest Yet Recorded; Value Is Under '32.

British imports of fruit during 1933 reached the highest level yet recorded, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Trade Commissioner James Somerville, jr., London.

Total fruit receipts last year, the report shows, amounted to 29,000,000 cwt., an increase of more than 1,250,000 cwt. over the preceding year and about 450,000 cwt. over 1931, the previous record year for fruit imports.

Value Declines.

Notwithstanding the marked rise in volume, however, the declared value of British fruit imports in 1933, amounting to £26,000,000, was nearly £1,000,000 under the 1932 figure and was less than the total value recorded in any year since 1922.

A noteworthy development in connection with the British import trade in fruit has been the steadily declining prices which have accompanied the progressive rise in the volume of fruit imports in recent years, the report points out.

In connection with individual fruit items, the outstanding feature of the 1933 import trade was the marked rise in receipts of oranges, imports of which reached a record total of 11,562,000 cwt., an increase of 2,200,000 cwt. over 1932. The increase in orange imports, together with a substantial rise in receipts of lemons, was the chief factor contributing to the high level of aggregate British fruit imports in 1933.

Apple Imports Cut.

Imports of apples during the past calendar year amounted to 7,459,000 cwt., a decline of 632,000 cwt. compared with 1932, but a total well above the average for the five-year period of 1928-32.

Imports of pears and grapefruit were slightly larger in 1933 than in the preceding year, but in each case substantially lower than the 1931 figure. Imports of bananas in 1933 were approximately 1,000,000 cwt. under the record total of 17,000,000 cwt. recorded in 1932.

U. S. Exports Of Films Rise During 1933

A volume increase of approximately 4,000,000 feet and a value decline of $540,000 were registered in 1933 in United States export trade in motion picture film, compared with 1932, according to preliminary figures compiled by N. D. Golden, of the Commerce Department's Motion Picture Section.

Total film exports during the last calendar year, the report shows, amounted to 164,537,245 feet compared with 160,917,767 feet in 1932. The declared values for the two years were, respectively, $3,580,017 and $4,119,612.

Sound positive film was the largest item in this trade, exports increasing from 137,484,335 feet in 1932 to 147,696,004 feet in 1933. Exports of sound negative motion pictures declined from 11,983,815 feet to 9,881,811 feet.

Silent negative film exported in 1933 amounted to 3,157,955 feet compared with 2,954,484 feet in 1932. Silent positive film declined from 8,385,133 feet in 1932 to 3,601,475 feet during 1933.

The most important single market for American motion pictures in 1933 was the United Kingdom, importing 11,564,915 feet of positive film and 2,315,896 negative, against 11,515,773 feet and 4,728,291 feet, respectively, in 1932. Argentina, Canada, Brazil and France followed in the order named.

In the Far East, Australia ranks as the most important outlet for American film, taking 3,963,633 feet of positive film and 893,697 feet of negative film in 1933 compared with 4,518,380 and 1,612,316 feet, respectively, in 1932.

Exports of motion picture equipment increased in value to $198,889 in 1933 against $126,935 in 1932. Sales abroad of projectors during 1933 were valued at $310,888 compared with $255,720 in 1932.

Radio Station Killer Committed to Asylum

Los Angeles, Feb. 7 (AP).—Clarence Walter, middle-aged Montana wheat worker, who stabbed to death one man and wounded another in a radio station here Monday, was committed to a State asylum today.

Doctors said the lunacy manifest when he heard radio songs about a ring around the moon was a psychosis of the paranoid type, a gradual deterioration of intelligence which often leads to delusions and a mandatory urge of homicidal intent.

Noel Is Head of Group On Enforcement Award

F. Regis Noel, president of the District Bar Association, has been designated chairman of the jury of award of the United States Flag Association to determine the recipient of the Flag Association Law Enforcement Medal.

Serving with Mr. Noel will be former District Attorney Leo A. Rover and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. Their task will be to select the person in the District who contributed the most to law enforcement work during 1933.

Virginia Facing Defective Crisis

State Hospitals Surveyed in New Welfare Book.

Richmond, Feb. 7 (AP).—Because of "inadequate provisions for the care of mentally defective persons, who are largely responsible for illegitimacy and the criminal population of the State, Virginia is facing serious and growing difficulties," it is asserted in an official study of State hospitals for the insane, to be published this week by the State department of public welfare.

Announcement of the publication of this "most comprehensive, detailed and complete study of our patient-care system and needs ever undertaken in America," was made today by Arthur W. James, State commissioner of public welfare.

Although not concerned with the physical aspects of the plants now devoted to the care of the State's insane and mentally defective, the new book is expected to prove of value to the present legislative committee, which is also inquiring into the immediate patient-care and hospitalization needs of the State hospitals.

Gallon-a-Month Proposed.

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 7 (AP).—A bill to change the State quart-a-month liquor law to a gallon a month was introduced in the House today.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WE had an uncle in Perry, Mich., who went broke by the entirely fortuitous process of discovering an oil well in the apple orchard. It seems he might have done better by owning a symphony orchestra.

Case in point is the New York Philharmonic-Symphony which requires a cool half million to meet its deficit and operating expenses for three years. As a consequence, public-spirited citizens in New York have organized themselves into campaign committees for the purpose of raising necessary funds, and one of their first acts has been to send circular letters to all radio editors in the hope of appealing to music lovers throughout the country for support. The committee is pretty confident that radio listeners, if apprised of the orchestra's circumstances, will want to help as far as they are able.

In times past the Philharmonic Society seldom went out of its own ranks to obtain sufficient money to defray the annual deficit. The Philharmonic never made money. But there was a time when some of the members of the society did.

As far as we are concerned, Columbia's Sunday broadcast of the Philharmonic is one of the high spots of the radio week.

U. S. Tobacco Crop Rulings Shield Tenants

(Associated Press.)

Under the rules, the limitation placed upon contracting producers not to increase their 1934 acreage of basic crops for sale over the 1932 or 1933 acreage, includes the acreage of small grains planted, annual row crops that are fed in the field, hay and seed crops harvested, and all crops removed from the land by man.

The limitation upon live stock was interpreted as including beef cattle and sheep, if they are designated by law as basic commodities. While the number of dairy cattle was limited in the contract, the volume of milk and its products produced were not.

Loss Must Be Proved.

The estimated number of pounds of tobacco stolen or destroyed by fire, may be included in the base production figure, if satisfactory proof of the loss is given the county committee.

The provision in contracts by which tenants are not to be reduced in number below those on the farm in 1933 was interpreted to apply to all share-tenants and share-croppers who gain a substantial part of their income from the tobacco they grow on the farm, whether or not they maintain residence on the farm. Also, farmers who sign contracts are prohibited from producing tobacco as owner operator or tenant, and are restrained from demonstrating for tobacco production on any farm not covered by an adjustment contract.

Release of rented acres for planting to crops to be harvested in 1935 would be given only after the 1934 tobacco crop has been harvested.

Tenants' Interests Defined.

The new regulations also defined the interest of the share-croppers or tenants, as set out in contracts for burley fire-cured and dark air-cured tobacco, to mean that such tenants shall participate in the first payment in proportion to their interest in the entire acreage.

The rulings clarify the status of those authorized to sign contracts in a representative capacity. Officers, or representatives who have been authorized by filing of a statement under corporate seal, may sign for corporations; executors, administrators, receivers, guardians, may sign for their fiduciary by presenting court orders; agents or managers for producers may sign if given power of attorney.

CWA Charge Of Democrat Stirs Protest

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 7 (Spl.). Delegate George A. Rairdon (Republican), of Mason County, expresed his resentment today in the House of Delegates over a statement by Senator A. C. Herold (Democrat), Braxton, chairman of the joint legislative committee probing the CWA in West Virginia, that Rairdon had resigned from the committee because it was disclosing "Republican maladministration."

The Mason County delegate said Herold could not get five members of the House to approve the statement and repeated his statement that he had resigned because the probe appeared to be a row between two political factions. Herold characterized Rairdon's statement as "preposterous."

United States Senator M. M. Neely, Rairdon declared, "took advantage of this opportunity to appeal to those persons who are unemployed by charging that political preferment was being shown in job distribution."

"If any relief would have come to these unemployed," Rairdon added, "I would gladly have given my time to the committee work."

The Legislative inquiry was ordered after Senator Neely had demanded the removal of William N. Beehler, State CWA chairman, on the ground that preference was being shown Republicans in CWA work.

The committee continued its inquiry today with its exclusively Democratic membership, appointment to the vacancy caused by Rairdon's resignation not having been made by Speaker Hiner.

Subject to the approval of the State CWA, the Roane County Welfare Board has appointed Gay M. Sargent, of Spencer, as county Civil Works Administrator to replace Miss Mabel Sutherland, a State CWA official who has been filling the place temporarily.

Peery Drops 2 New Taxes, Pleads for Bill

Addresses Joint Assembly and Urges Support for Schools.

Richmond, Feb. 7 (AP).—Gov. Peery today struck from his ten-point revenue program the taxes on receipts of moving-picture theaters and on dividends of domestic corporations, and urged passage of the remaining items as a means of providing an eight-month school term.

The Governor appeared before a joint session of the General Assembly for the first time to deliver the address, in which he reiterated his stand for an increase of a million dollars a year in the budget appropriation for schools and for a balanced budget.

The elimination of the two items from his tax program, he said, would reduce the amount of new revenue from $1,161,000 to $875,000 annually.

Only for Schools.

The Governor said he was asking no increase for any purpose except for schools, and asserted that his program called for a tax readjustment rather than for an increase. He pointed to his recommendation for a decrease in automobile license taxes which he said seemed reasonably certain of passage with relief to 300,000 taxpayers in the sum of $1,800,000.

In addition to his own program he reiterated his indorsement of the increase from 1½ to 3 per cent in the tax on receipts of public service corporations, which Gov. Pollard estimated would yield $500,000 a year.

Speech Widely Discussed.

The address of the Governor was the subject of wide-spread discussion during the afternoon among the members, who have been torn between the desire to increase school appropriations and reluctance to increase taxes.

"I'm still against it," said Senator W. A. Garrett, veteran Senate finance chairman.

"The message has clearly demonstrated the necessity for additional revenue to provide an eight-month school term in Virginia," said Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the House Finance Committee.

They're Buying Them in Six, Eight, Nine Pairs

We have a right, we believe, to puff out our chest over our Dr. M. W. Locke Orthopedic Shoes. When we put them into our stocks around eleven months ago, customers flocked in from all parts of the city. People who had been sending to Canada for these shoes came to The Hecht Co. instead.

We kept records of purchases—most customers bought more than one pair, and many of them went into higher brackets, including six, eight and nine-pair purchases. These records stand by themselves.

People found that Dr. M. W. Locke Orthopedic Shoes brought them relief—and they continued to buy them. In our opinion they're the finest orthopedic shoes on the market. They've been personally designed and approved by Dr. M. W. Locke, of Williamsburg, Ontario, Canada, who has treated thousands of foot suffers. We are exclusive Washington agents for these shoes.
